Most land mine use by US military banned, except for Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Joe Biden's administration announced Tuesday that it would restrict the use of anti-personnel land mines by the U.S. military, aligning the country's policy more closely with an international treaty banning the deadly explosives.

DeSantis wants panel to probe trafficking, sanctuary cities

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis on Friday asked that a statewide grand jury be set up to examine networks that illegally smuggle people into the state as part of an investigation that also would focus on local governments that he says violate state law by adopting "sanctuary" policies.

'Everything is on fire': Ukraine region weathers bombardment

KYIV, Ukraine (AP) — Russian attacks laid down a curtain of fire Tuesday across areas of eastern Ukraine where pockets of resistance are denying Moscow full military control of the region, almost four months after the Kremlin unleashed an invasion.

'The impossible': Ukraine's secret, deadly rescue missions

KYIV, Ukraine (AP) — As was his habit before each flight, the veteran Ukrainian army pilot ran a hand along the fuselage of his Mi-8 helicopter, caressing the heavy transporter's metal skin to bring luck to him and his crew. They would need it. Their destination— a besieged steel mill in the brutalized city of Mariupol.

In light of Father's Day, Seminole County officials held a roundtable discussion to plan out the implementation of HB 7065.

HB 7065 was signed by Ron DeSantis back in April 2022. The legislation includes nearly $70 million in funding for mentoring programs and support systems through the Department of Juvenile Justice and the Department Reiter Park was the place to be on June 18th to celebrate Longwood's first Juneteenth Celebration of Freedom.

From 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Longwood residents braved the 96-degree heat with the help of snow cones, smoothies, and lemonade. Kids beat the heat by racing through the crowd to be the first to cool off in the Splash Pad.

Longwood's Juneteenth celebration had something for everyone.

The Seminole County Sheriff's Office brought neon paint, a police car, and a sheriff's car for kids to paint. By the end of the event, both cars were covered in green, pink, and orange handprints.

While children hung out in the kid's zone, adults shopped

Pieces of the Past: Pounding the pavement

This article is a reprint of one that appeared in the June 2022 issue edition of Citrus Industry Magazine.

By Eubanks Burnette

I was reading a book about Dundee Citrus Growers Association, "D Is for Diamonds," by Gordon Smith when I came across a story about Hoyle Pounds. He was inducted into the Florida Agricultural Hall of Fame in 1980 and the Florida Citrus Hall of Fame in 1986.

Pounds had a long career as an innovator. He was born in Ocoee, Florida in 1893 and moved to Winter Garden in the early 1920's where he founded Pounds Motor Company and sold Fordson tractors "to grove owners who were replacing mule power." For decades, he was instrumental in designing and building fertilizer attachments, hedgers, sprayers, grove tractors, dusters and many other pieces of specialized grove equipment.

Pounds also designed a lawn mower deck for his good friend and fishing buddy, Neal Smith, who was a creator of the Snapper lawn mowers. Although they initially kept the idea a secret, when the project was completed, the two men had made the first Snapper Turtle lawn mower decks, and Pounds sold them at Pounds Motor Company.

In the 1940's, Pounds formed the Pounds Industrial Gas Company to meet the rising demand for liquefied petroleum gas for farm and grove businesses. He originally asked Green Fuel of Orlando if it would keep a full gas truck at Pounds Motor Company 24 hours a day. Green Fuel declined the request, so Pounds built his own gas-storage facility to supply his customers. The facility was so big that a company in Oklahoma had to design it because no one in Florida knew how.

Hoyle Pounds

Pounds Industrial Gas served Winter Garden and surrounding areas between the 1940s and 1980s. Pounds incorporated his business after two of his sons, Herbert and Russell, were discharged from the Air Force after World War II. They worked with Pounds and helped him run the family business. Another son, Donald, operated the tractor company in Winter Haven.

Pounds also served as the volunteer fire chief of Winter Garden for 41 years. The original fire truck that he bought and donated to the city in 1954 was recently returned to Winter Garden and restored by the Winter Garden Heritage Museum.

But it was the patent he received in 1928 for the first rubber tractor tires that earned him economic success and the nickname "Mr. Tractor." Rubber tires turned a clunky steel-wheeled tractor that couldn't gain traction in Florida's sandy soil into a road friendly, smooth-riding machine that pulled and traveled well both in and out of the field.

Pounds sold so many of his conversion kits with his tractors that his sales outstripped "his quota of tractors from Ford Motor Company and he had to get tractors from other Ford auto dealers who had to take some tractors with their allocation of cars but were less adept at selling tractors than Pounds."

At the time of his invention, steel tractor wheels could destroy tree roots and also damaged the new roads that were being built as Orlando continued to grow, so it was illegal to drive tractors on a paved street.

Gordon Smith recounts this story: "Pounds fitted one of his new Fordson tractors with uninflected used truck tires held firmly on the rims with specially designed steel clamps. On December 22, 1926, he no doubt shocked the local citizenry by driving his rubber-tired Fordson tractor for five miles down the forbidden public highway. The occasion was the first public demonstration of his new invention at a grove owned by H.E. and Warren Patrick."

Maybe that's where the term "pounding the pavement" originated!

Brenda Eubanks Burnette is executive director of the Florida Citrus Hall of Fame. Pieces of the Past is presented in partnership with Florida Southern College's McKay Archives Center in Lakeland.

SNARKY McSNIDE SAYS

The Times They Are A-Changing

In Florida, the third largest state by population, there are a lot of cars running around with geographic names that don't fit. There are Denalis, Tucsons, Tahoes, Sedonas, Rios, Sorentos, Tellurides, Mojaves, Malibus, Colorados, Montanas, Equators, Everests, New Yorkers, etc., There were two from our state, long discontinued, the Dodge Daytona and the Chrysler Sebring.

We need more cars named for places in the Sunshine State. Instead of a Toyota Tundra, a Toyota Tampa, instead of a Chevrolet Malibu, something catchy, like a Chevrolet Micanopy, an Orlando in the place of a Colorado, a Mt.Dora instead of a Montana, the possibilities are endless.

Speaking of Tucson, in 1950, its population was 45,454, ten years later it was

212,892. Wow, what happened? Air conditioning became available for the common man and he then retired to Arizona. (And to Florida, of course, one of whose two statues in the National Statuary Hall in the U. S. Capitol honors John Gorrie of Apalachicola. He is credited with inventing the process now known as air conditioning)

Sara Jacobson passed away in late May. Sara lived in Sanford most of her life, except for a time in the Peace Corps in Chile and a stint with PBS in New York. Sara was instrumental in getting both the downtown commercial and the residential immediately to the south, designated as historic districts. When Pete Knowles threw out all the building plans from the 1920s and 30s, Sara supposedly rescued and stored them out at the airport. Wonder where they are now?

First TEACH Graduate: Jessica Cerone's Education Career is on a Fast Track

Jessica Cerone excited as she graduated from UCF.

By Emily Hollingshead
Student Communications Coordinator
Marketing and Communications
Seminole State College of Florida

Jessica Cerone is the first graduate of the TEACH program, an educational program designed to grow Seminole County teachers from local high schools.

The program was created through the partnership of Seminole State College of Florida, the University of Central Florida (UCF) and Seminole County Public Schools (SCPS) to fill teaching positions in the school district. Cerone is the first graduate of the program, where she got her Associate in Arts by dual enrolling at Seminole State while taking classes at Seminole High School before transitioning to UCF to complete her bachelor's degree. While at UCF's Teaching Academy, she interned at Idyllwild Elementary where she teaches today.

What inspired you to be a teacher?

My teachers, especially from Laver Elementary. I had a really great experience there, but I really think that the love for learning that was established in me through my teachers really pushed me to keep going even when I faced challenges. I just always loved kids and it was just something always on my heart and I really felt called to teaching.

Why did you decide to join the TEACH program?

I like the idea of coming back to do something for the community that helped me.

I really enjoyed my experience in Seminole County schools. I felt like I graduated prepared to go to college and to complete college like I obviously have done. So I like the idea of coming back to do something for the community that helped me.

What was it like doing dual enrollment at Seminole State?

My junior year I took four classes at Seminole High School and then I was taking three classes at Seminole State. So I actually left after my four classes in the morning. I left Seminole High School and would go to Seminole State. I don't think I was really treated differently because of my age by other professors or the other students. They just look at me as any other college student. Whenever there were pep rallies, homecoming, prom, I went to all those things, so I was able to go with my friends. I really never felt left out by that. It was exciting. I'd finished class at Seminole State and then be like "Oh, there's still time for the pep rally!" and drive right back up for it and hang out with everyone. So I still feel like I got to experience better parts of high school, the more fun parts of high school anyways.

How was the transition to UCF?

Of course, UCF is a larger campus and everything, but what's nice is pretty much all my teacher classes were in the Teaching Academy, so there was kind of one building and there was a parking garage right next to it. My advisors at UCF were also really great at helping me adjust. Luckily the credits definitely transferred very well over from Seminole State to UCF, so that wasn't too complicated either.

How was the transition to having your own classroom?

Yeah, that was definitely intimidating for sure. I mean, it helped that I was familiar with the school because it was one that I interned at, but it was intimidating. It's definitely feeling more like home now for sure. I mean, of course there's still more to adjust to, but the support that is at the school is phenomenal. I feel very supported. If I need to cry, if I need to laugh at someone, if I just need to vent, I know that there is someone here that I can go to. I can say I love coming to work, I'm doing the job I want to do.

What advice would you give students considering the TEACH program?

If teaching is something that interests you, you should just become a part of the program. I mean, if it doesn't work out, it doesn't work out if you take a different route. There are so many benefits to being a part of it, if that's what you continue to do. If you find yourself really passionate about that, it's worth it to go for it.

Eric Hutter on Market Volatility and Stress

By Eric Hutter
Financial Columnist

You've worked hard all your life, played by the rules, only to have most of your nest egg wiped out due to something you could NEVER have controlled. For most of us, this would be devastating and possibly life-changing!

For most pre-retirees and retirees, the #1 concern is fear of running out of money in retirement! What options do we have as we wonder whether Social Security will be around, and the days of pensions being gone?

There are three common methods people use to secure income in retirement. It's important to note that we are focusing on our "retirement years", because we may still have time to make up for any losses in our younger working years. Working longer may no longer be an option when we are older, and our health may be compromised.

Here is the retirement strategy most people take:

1. Invest their principal in a fixed interest rate vehicle, such as a bond or CD, and then attempt to live off the interest without touching the principal.

2. Purchase an annuity that offers a lifetime income stream.

3. Make systematic withdrawals from a non-guaranteed, "market-driven" portfolio containing the possible risk of loss.

Let's focus on #3, because options #1 & #2 provide guaranteed results.

The problem with making systematic withdrawals from a non-guaranteed portfolio containing the possible risk of loss is that you can never rely on that income! Your income will fluctuate because it is based on a performance-based asset.

Here is the most important thing to consider, which most people overlook. For example, if you use a 5% withdrawal rate from a "market-driven" account and that account (portfolio) goes down in any given year, let's say 10%...you just reduced your account value by 15%! That's not even considering a modest 2-3% inflation rate. In that case, you may have reduced the account balance by 17-18%! Now, most would say you need 17-18% to recover those losses. That's the wrong strategy. It would be best to have more because you are starting with a lower value.

Proper comprehensive financial planning needs to provide an appropriate mix of market-driven investments for growth and protected types of investment vehicles like annuities and CDs, to name a few. One should never solely rely on market-driven accounts to generate consistent, reliable income in retirement because it's impossible, and it will always depend on "performance."

When the stock market starts tumbling, daily injections of bad news can spark anxiety, fuel uncertainty, and trigger radical decisions in even the most seasoned investors. Panic isn't a strategy! It's essential to keep focused when markets are volatile.

Here are five strategies to consider when volatility strikes:

1. Stay true to your goals, and don't abandon your strategy for something that will be temporary.

2. Stay invested, as most of us do the opposite and panic sell at the lowest point.

3. Always stay diversified, and the old saying "never put all your eggs in one basket" still holds true.

4. Pay close attention to risk management as it is always a good idea to determine if you could get similar results by taking on less risk.

5. Stay on top of what your financial professional is doing, and remember it's YOUR money, and play an active role in managing it.

VETERANS POST:

10-Foot Stack of Mail Sits Unopened at VA

by Freddy Groves

Imagine a pile of mail heaped 10 feet high sitting unopened for 10 months. That's what was found in the basement of a rented Department of Veterans Affairs facility in Atlanta. When investigated, the stack was determined to contain 17,660 pieces of mail that included claims, correspondence from veterans, 10,020 medical records and $207,000 in checks, some of which had already expired.

The problems began when a health care arm of the VA wanted to commandeer the basement space being used by a VA payments group. They came to a verbal agreement that the new group would take over dealing with the mail if the payment group left. A handshake later, it was done. Except nobody asked the new group if they even knew how to process correspondence, records and checks. And, apparently, nobody did.

So, although the new people took a stab at dealing with the mail, for the most part the pile sat and grew as more mail came in.

And sat and grew some more. The new group asked the old group for help. The old group said no. Enterprising souls in the new group sent off some of the mail to other facilities -- 14 boxes to one facility alone -- which sent it right back. They tried again, sending another 13 boxes.

What happens when payment requests are ignored? Veterans can't go to that outside provider and treatment is delayed or denied. Appeals can be denied if not received in time. Veterans with bad test results may not be notified.

Within a short period of time after the report came out, the VA acted and got the backlog cleared up.

The worrisome part of this is that with a coming consolidation of 82 claims processing groups at the VA, this can happen again if steps aren't taken to ensure that mail is handled correctly.

To learn more, go to www.va.gov and search for "unopened mail backlog."

Making an immediate splash

Hagerty High's Riley Greene makes his much anticipated Major League debut

By Dean Smith
Herald Staff

It was a couple of months later than hoped, but former Hagerty High School standout Riley Greene finally made his Major League Baseball debut for the Detroit Tigers before a nationwide television audience on Saturday.
The 6-foot-3, 200-pounder was expected to be the starting centerfielder for the Tigers coming out of Spring Training, but suffered a broken foot in the final few days of camp and it took six weeks for the 21-year-old to heal up and make a rehab assignment in Lakeland with the Flying Tigers before being activated by the big club.

The excitement of the No. 2 prospect in all of baseball making his debut evidently rubbed off on the rest of the Tigers, who came into the contest with the Texas Rangers having lost six games in a row and being outscored, 43-7, as the hosts exploded for 14 runs on 19 hits in a 14-7 victory at Comerica Park.
And it didn't take long for the Oviedo native to make his presence felt. Batting No. 6 in the order, the left-hander blooped the second pitch he saw into left field for a single, sending the huge crowd, including his family, into a frenzy.
It would end up being an awesome first game for Greene, as he would go 2-for-3, with two bases on ball and two runs scored.
Detroit would also win, 7-3, on Sunday, and while Greene went 0-for-2, he also walked two more times.
Greene and the Tigers traveled to Boston on Monday and dropped a 5-2 decision to the Red Sox. Greene drew a walk, his fifth in three games, and scored a run to tie the game at 1-1 in the second inning and later had a single to finish the night 1-for-3 with a run scored.
In his first three games in the Majors, Greene is 3-for-8 with five walks, two strike outs and three runs scored.

Leesburg's Najer Victor and Sanford's Jeff Liquori (top) were named the FCSL Pitcher and Player of the Week, respectively, for Week 2, while Chase Costello (above) was the River Rats Pitcher of the Week for the second straight week and Taylor Nelson (right, top) and Dylan Dieguez (right, bottom) were the award nominees from the Seminole Snappers.

Sanford's Liquori, Leesburg's Victor claim honors; Diamond Dawgs widen league lead

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Throughout the 2022 season, the Florida Collegiate Summer League will honor two players at the conclusion of each week: one as the FCSL Player of the Week, and one as the FCSL Pitcher of the Week. This week's honors represent performances from Monday, June 13 to Saturday, June 18.
The second Florida League Player of the Week is Sanford's Jeff Liquori (Florida Southern). The reigning first team All-Florida League selection is well on his way to his second FCSL All-Star Game appearance, as the Lake Mary native had a monster week in the second full week of the 2022 season. Liquori drove in eight runs on the week, including a two home run, five RBI effort against the DeLand Suns last Monday. He also went 3-for-3 with three RBI and three runs scored in an 11-1 win over Winter Garden on Friday.
Through his first 12 games of the season, Liquori has belted four home runs and driven in 16 runs, and leads the Florida League in both categories. The Lake Mary High School alumnus has reached safely in all but two of his games to start the season, and has five multi-hit games and four games with multiple RBI for the River Rats.
In the second week of the season, the Florida League Pitcher of the Week is Najer Victor (Florida Gulf Coast University) of the Leesburg Lightning. Victor got the ball Friday night at Pat Thomas Stadium, and completely controlled the DeLand Suns. The Clermont native did not allow a hit in his six innings on the mound, striking out seven and surrendering just one unearned run. The Lightning would go on to win the game in walk-off fashion, 4-3.
Friday's start was the longest of the season for Victor, who currently has a 1.25 earned run average over his 14.1 innings of work. The FGCU Eagle has allowed just eight hits and three walks

Gen 4 zooms to Rum Race win

New spinnaker helps the Hayden crew; Summer Sailstice sees race break out

Special to the Herald

SANFORD — 10 boats finished this week's (June 15) Malibu Black Rum Race!
Taking advantage of sea breeze at 6-to-8 knots, the Gen 4 team was able to power to a first place overall finish and first displacement boat.
Fisk Hayden, Steve Hayden, Angie Rimes Hayden and Monique Rogers had Gen 4's new North Sails spinnaker going fast on the downwind legs!
The battle for second place found Wicklow Way under Richard Gailey edging out Show Me and Andy Forrest by eight seconds in corrected time. Seconds have separated these two boats over the past month of Malibu Black Rum racing. Feeling the love? No? me either!
Off the pace this week was Alan Moore sailing the Nacra. The long downwind legs didn't favor the catamaran, but Alan managed to collect another first multi sticker.
Tony Porterfield and Olivier Fleury on Fleur de Mer II were first planning boat.

Henry's Depot again hosted the scoring and awards ceremony/post race get together and it was Fleury winning the Malibu Black Rum...again!

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

Over time, defenders who play mechanically will not do nearly as well as those who play thoughtfully. Today's deal from a duplicate game provides a case in point.

The deal was played at eight tables, and at every table the final contract was four spades by South, against which West led the queen of hearts. At seven of the tables, declarer made 10 tricks — five spades, two hearts and three clubs. Since seven declarers achieved this result, and since 10 tricks seem to be there for the taking, this would seem to be the normal outcome. But it shouldn't be, as demonstrated by what happened at the eighth table.

First, let's see how the play went at the other tables. South won the heart lead, cashed the A-K of spades and led a spade to the jack. Declarer then tried a club finesse, losing the queen to East's king.

At this point, the defense varied. Some Easts shifted to a diamond, and after the defenders collected two diamonds, declarer had the rest, eventually discarding the heart six on dummy's nine of clubs. At the tables where East returned a heart, declarer similarly finished with 10 tricks.

At the table where the contract failed, East found a way to give South a chance to go wrong, and it made all the difference. Here, when declarer led a club to the jack at trick five, East did not take the king.

South naturally assumed that West had the king, in which case repeating the finesse was necessary and might even yield an overtrick. So declarer crossed to his hand with the heart king and led a club to the queen. This time East won, and the defenders quickly cashed a heart and two diamonds to set the contract.

East's refusal to win the first club is a play that has much to gain and little to lose. All it takes is a bit of thought and a natural reluctance to play mechanically.

Despite Western arms, Ukraine is outgunned in the east

By ANDREA ROSA
and JAMEY KEATEN
Associated Press

BAKHMUT, Ukraine (AP) — Holed up in a bombed-out house in eastern Ukraine, Ukrainian troops keep a careful accounting of their ammunition, using a door as a sort of ledger. Scrawled in chalk on the door are figures for mortar shells, smoke shells, shrapnel shells, flares.

Despite the heavy influx of weapons from the West, Ukrainian forces are outgunned by the Russians in the battle for the eastern Donbas region, where the fighting is largely being carried out by way of artillery exchanges.

While the Russians can keep up heavy, continuous fire for hours at a time, the defenders can't match the enemy in either weapons or ammunition and must use their ammo more judiciously.

At the outpost in eastern Ukraine, dozens and dozens of mortar shells are stacked up. But the troops' commander, Mykhailo Strebizh, who goes by the nom de guerre Gaiduk, lamented that if his fighters were to come under an intense artillery barrage, their cache would, at best, amount to only about four hours' worth of return fire.

Ukrainian authorities say the West's much-ballyhooped support for the country is not sufficient and is not arriving on the battlefield fast enough for this grinding and highly lethal phase of the war.

While Russia has kept quiet about its war casualties, Ukrainian authorities say up to 200 of their soldiers are dying each day. Russian forces are gaining ground slowly in the east, but experts say they are taking heavy losses.

The United States last week upped the ante with its largest pledge of aid for Ukrainian forces yet: an additional $1 billion in military assistance to help repel or reverse Russian advances.

But experts note that such aid deliveries haven't kept pace with Ukraine's needs, in part because defense industries aren't turning out weaponry fast enough.

"We're moving from peacetime to wartime," said Francois Heisbourg, a senior adviser at the Paris-based Foundation for Strategic Research think tank. "Peacetime means low production rates, and ramping up the production rate means that you have to first build industrial facilities. ... This is a defense-industrial challenge which is of a very great magnitude."

The Kiel Institute for the World Economy in Germany last week reported that the U.S. has delivered about half of its pledged commitments in military support for Ukraine, and Germany about one-third. Poland and Britain have both come through on much of what they promised.

Many foot soldiers say they can't even begin to match the Russians shot for shot, or shell for shell.

Earlier this month, Ukraine's ambassador in Madrid, Serhii Phoroltsev, thanked Spain — which trumpeted a shipment of 200 tons of military aid in April — but said the ammunition included was enough for only about two hours of combat.

Ukrainian filmmaker-turned-fighter Volodymyr Demchenko tweeted a video expressing gratitude for guns sent by the Americans, saying, "It's nice guns, and 120 bullets to each." But he lamented: "It's like 15 minutes of a fight."

Part of the problem, too, is that the Ukrainian forces, whose country was once a member of the Soviet Union, are more familiar with Soviet-era weaponry and must first be trained on the NATO equipment they are getting.

An untold number of Ukrainians have traveled abroad to get training on the Western weapons.

Of the $1 billion pledge from the U.S., only slightly more than one-third of that will be rapid, off-the-shelf deliveries by the Pentagon, and the rest will be available over a longer term. The pledge, which includes 18 howitzers and 36,000 rounds of ammunition for them, addresses Ukraine's plea for more longer-range weaponry.

That's still far short of what the Ukrainians want — 1,000 155 mm howitzers, 300 multiple-launch rocket systems, 500 tanks, 2,000 armored vehicles and 1,000 drones — as President Volodymyr Zelenskyy's adviser Mikhail Podolyak tweeted last week, before the latest big Western pledges.

"What the Ukrainians have got to do is conduct what military people tend to call a counter-battery operation" to respond to Russian artillery fire, said Ben Barry, a former director of the British Army Staff who is senior fellow for land warfare at the International Institute for Strategic Studies. "To do this, you need accurate weapons with a high rate of fire and a range that allows them to keep out of the way of the other side's artillery."

"The Ukrainians are saying they don't have enough long-range rockets to adequately suppress Russian artillery," he said. "I think they're probably right."

As it now stands, Ukrainian fighters often have to use "shoot and scoot" tactics — fire, then move before the Russians can zero in on them.

Better NATO hardware, even in small quantities, is often welcome.

On a nearby front on Saturday, a Ukrainian unit granted The Associated Press rare access to the firing of U.S.-supplied M777 howitzers — towable, 155 mm weapons — on Russian positions.

A lieutenant who goes by the call sign Wasp touted the M777's precision, speed of fire, simplicity of use and the ease with which it is camouflaged, saying the new hardware "raises our spirits" and "demoralizes the enemy because they see what the consequences are."

Denys Sharapov, Ukraine's deputy minister of defense in charge of procurement, told a publication of the U.S.-based National Defense Industrial Association that the weapons systems that have been received cover only 10% to 15% of the country's needs. He noted the breadth of the challenge — a front line with 1,000 kilometers (620 miles) of active combat.

Interviewed by National Defense magazine in an article published Wednesday, Sharapov said no single supplier could satisfy Ukraine's needs alone.

"Quite unfortunately for us, we have become the biggest consumer of weapons and ammunition in the world," he said.

Friends of Ukraine are digging in for the long haul.

Time may be on Ukraine's side, the experts say. Ukrainian fighters are both motivated and mobilized — all men in the country of 40 million have been called to fight, whereas Russia has so far avoided a call-up of conscripts, which could vastly tilt the war in Russia's favor but may not be popular domestically.

As for how long such fighting could last, analyst Heisbourg said a years-long war of attrition is "quite possible."

DISCUSSION

of Children and Families to motivate fathers to stay involved in their families.

Held on Friday, June 17 at 9 a.m. at Monroe Hall, the meeting was intended to create a conversation about the legislation and develop ideas on how to help Sanford families.

The Sanford roundtable discussion was the first of many following the Tallahassee press conference regarding HB 7065 plan.

"This is about how do we elevate our fathers and get them engaged in supporting our young people," Department of Juvenile Justice Secretary Eric Hall said.

City officials plan to continue partnering with nonprofit organizations like Central Florida Urban League to create more opportunities for the community's future fathers.

City of Sanford Mayor Art Woodruff wants to engage the community and make sure that the initiative to reaches more people.

The nearly $70 million in funding will be given out as grants to support mentoring programs.

Last week, Hall spoke about his excitement for the mission and the impact it will have on the Sanford community because, to Hall, "family engagement is an essential part of DJJ's vision and mission and having an active and engaged father can make all the difference in helping a child build resiliency and overcome the obstacles they face."

During a press conference held directly after the meeting, Hall spoke about the importance of fatherhood.

"We understand the importance of having our dads engaged... but in the event where a dad may not be able to be involved, how do we support our young children and even children who are in our juvenile justice system, how do we get the role models there?" Hall said.

Hall explained that bringing the community together and getting fathers involved with their families is the best public safety strategy because it can help put people back on the right track.

The Department of Juvenile Justice plans to use $3.7 million to help the youth in residential programs have access to post secondary education.

Senior Chancellor Henry Mack said that the Florida Department of Education also plans to do their part by covering gap fees for individuals looking to further their education to address systemic barriers.

"This is about creating opportunities and not only building the fathers of today, but the father of tomorrow," Hall said.

around at vendors selling clothes, crafts, tupperware, accessories, and plants. The event's farmer's market featuring handcrafted sauces, beers, eggs, and fresh produce caught the attention of shoppers.

Information booths from Seminole State College, Girl Scouts, local officials running for office, and Longwood Babe Ruth were also open for people to tour.

Longwood knows that every good party needs good food. Food trucks kept people coming back for more with an endless variety of hot dogs, ice cream, barbecue classics, and cupcakes that satisfied appetites.

The Juneteenth celebration featured live music to go along with the day's activities.

The main act at the event has been performing throughout Florida for 14 years. Some may recognize them from Sanford night street events or from Cranes Roost's Uptown Vibes event.

Silkee Smoove Hall Band brought their talent, lively energy, and timeless songs to Reiter Park's amphitheater stage.

Band manager Angela Hall said, "we were excited about performing when we found out this would be Longwood's first Juneteenth Celebration."

They entertained the audience with everything from Motown to R&B to smooth jazz.

The crowd listened and sang along to Silkee Smoove play hits like "I Wanna Dance with Somebody" by Whitney Houston and "We Are Family" by Sister Sledge. Kids danced to the music; some even convinced their parents to join them.

trumpet, drums, and bass radiated through the park, people explored the many booths and vendors, walked their dogs, and enjoyed the day.

Longwood Mayor and former WWE wrestler Matt Morgan could be spotted walking around the event as well.

Although the event was a success, the weather had other plans. A storm ended the party an hour early as dark clouds moved in and strong winds blew over tents.
