Virus cases rise to 23

Hospital requests mask order; 11 recovered, 12 active here

Gillespie County has seen its number of COVID-19 cases more than triple in the past week and more are expected.

On Tuesday, the county reported its 18th case of the disease caused by the novel coronavirus and state sources show 23. The 18th case is isolating at home and likely contracted the disease at his/her household. No information is available on cases 19-23.

Cases 16 and 17 were confirmed Monday and also transmitted through family spread. No. 15 was thought to be community spread.

According to city and hospital officials, 11 cases in Gillespie are considered recovered and 12 are active.

HCM seeks mask order

Last week, officials from Hill Country Memorial urged city and county officials to implement face covering requirements.

"For the safety and well-being of our community members, business owners, employees and visitors, please enact measures that require all commercial entities that provide direct goods or services to the public to ensure all employees and customers wear a mask or face covering if unable to social distance," the HCM spokesman said.

As a tourist destination, Fredericksburg has seen an increased number of visitors in

DEVELOPMENT

'Seven Hills' development agreement may be killed

Council will decide whether to extend rebate offer for $70-million facility

By Samuel Sutton
 Standard-Radio Post reporter

Developers for the proposed Seven Hills Resort and Conference Center project are in default of their economic development agreement with the City of Fredericksburg.

City Manager Kent Myers said the city sent a letter to Dennis Murphree, a general partner of the $75-million, 150-hotel room project, notifying him of this on June 1. They received the letter on June 5.

"The letter said they had 30 days to get their financing committed," Myers said. "If this doesn't occur, then we can consider terminating the agreement."

Murphree said they weren't able to meet the deadline for their tax rebate because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Myers said the tax rebate is the basis for the economic development agreement.

"The agreement states that if Seven Hills develops and operates a conference center meeting certain city requirements, then they are eligible for a rebate of their Hotel Occupancy Taxes for up to 20 years," Myers said.

The deadline for this is July 5. Murphree said he hopes the city will extend the deadline, as he believes it's important for the city.

Fredericksburg City Council and city staff will meet in executive session on July 6 to discuss what happens next with the project.

Picking up momentum

Murphree said the project was back on track after the lost four months due to COVID-19, and debunked a rumor that it folded due to lack of funding.

"That couldn't be further from the truth," Murphree said.

He added that the project has "picked up momentum" since late May, and that they're "bringing in a huge investor" in early July. Murphree wouldn't disclose the investor.

Resident fears pipeline drilling could harm threatened salamander species

By Samuel Sutton
Standard-Radio Post reporter

Pipeline company Kinder Morgan did not make note of a newly discovered species of salamander found in the Pedernales River when filing for horizontal directional drilling (HDD) permits in 2019, a local resident discovered.

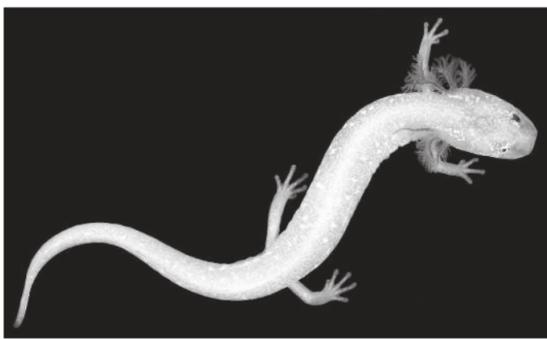

Dr. Owen (Stan) Parker wrote in a letter to the Fredericksburg Standard-Radio Post that notice of objection to allow this type of drilling in the karsts and aquifers in the Pedernales River basin has been given to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Texas Railroad Commission.

The Eurycea sp 2 salamander was discovered by University of Texas biologists in the Pedernales River basin in January 2019.

Kinder Morgan is planning to drill in that area for its 430-mile pipeline which will move natural gas from the Permian Basin.

Parker wrote in his letter that Kinder Morgan didn't file occurrences of the salamanders in the Pedernales River basin because the process for recognizing them as federally endangered had not been completed at that time.

"However, the new species can qualify as endangered or threatened species designation provided in Endangered Biologists at the University of Texas at Austin identified this salamander who lives near the Pedernales River in February of 2019. Species Act, as enforcement personnel would have substantial difficulty in differentiating between Eurycea sp 2 and the nearby federally listed endangered Barton Springs Salamander, Eurycea sosorum," Parker wrote.

Parker said the first notice he sent to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was to notify them that they overlooked the salamander in their assessments.

He also sent an email to other "like-minded individuals," saying the agencies should admit their assessment of a passage over Hill Country aquifers and karsts was "incomplete and inaccurate."

"Their avoidance of mentioning the critically endangered salamander in the Pedernales River basin was a purposeful attempt to sneak this route over and into that salamander's habitat, and their avoidance of using (Endangered Species Act) section 4(a) (7e) was a purposeful attempt to negate the proper regulation of their duties by not assigning an endangered/threatened species status to the Pedernales River basin salamander," he wrote.

In that email, he claimed the agencies and Kinder Morgan's biological assessment consultant, SWCA Environmental Consultants, knew about the Hill Country aquifers and karsts, the county's drinking water and the salamanders, but allowed Kinder Morgan to continue with its project.

On June 14, he sent another notice to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and to the person who wrote the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service manuscript recommending Kinder Morgan proceed with their route through the Hill Country.

"I tried to amplify charges that they were complacent with regulating Kinder Morgan and throwing us under the bus," Parker said.

Parker said in an interview that the best outcome of reaching out to the mentioned organizations would be for them to stop the project altogether and reverse any progress previously made.

Company response

Kinder Morgan Vice President Allen Fore said the company has been working within the guidelines set by all of the regulatory agencies.

"People have a lot of opinions on what guidelines should be, but we have to follow what the guidelines are," Fore said.

He added the company has been in full compliance during this project.

There are regulators on site during drilling and, if problems occur or an endangered species appears, Fore said the matter would be investigated.

Historic District Design Guidelines workshop postponed

By Samuel Sutton
Standard-Radio Post reporter

A workshop on the new Historic District Design Guidelines has been postponed.

The meeting originally set for June 25 will be rescheduled, said Historic Preservation Officer Anna Hudson.

"We wanted to have a workshop with the board and the public because I think people are kind of tired of the Zoom meetings," she said. "But given the recent spike (of COVID-19 cases), I'm just not comfortable having an in-person, indoor meeting."

Hudson said there is no adoption date at this time, as not enough public comment has been gathered on the new guidelines. There were two Zoom webinars in early June, but the board experienced a low turnout.

The City of Fredericksburg has extended its contract with HHM & Associates, Hudson said, allowing for feedback on the first draft to be postponed.

"It's not a budget issue," Hudson said. "The work for them will still be the same.

"At this point, they're essentially waiting on us to get on the first draft. They're not going to spend more time on it until we get comments back on them."

A draft of the new guidelines and a comment form can be found on the city's website at fbgtx.org/999/Design-Guidelines.

Comments are still being accepted and should be sent to ahudson@fbgtx.org.

Independence Day fireworks display to light up night sky

City of Fredericksburg's July 4 fireworks display will continue as traditionally planned at Lady Bird Johnson Municipal Park, 432 Lady Bird Drive. City officials will advertise other locations for the 9:30 p.m. show as well, such as the Gillespie County Airport, 191 Airport Road, and the Gillespie County Fair Grounds, 530 Fair Drive.

Other locations to view the fireworks are Oakcrest Park, 2926 Texas 16 South, and the parking lot of Fredericksburg High School, 1107 Texas 16 South.

The city is encouraging attendees to view in a "drive-in" fashion and to limit exiting of their vehicles.

For those uncomfortable with large crowds, the city is working with Texas Rebel Radio to livestream the event on social media. Details will be released soon. In addition, patriotic music will be played on 910 AM (KNAF).

People aged 65 and older are at a higher risk of COVID-19. The city is encouraging individuals to avoid contact within six feet of people in these age groups.

People should maintain six feet of separation from others outside their groups. A group is defined as no more than 10 people, including members of the household and people who traveled together to the event.

Masks and face coverings are encouraged. If anyone is sick, the city encourages them to stay home.

Due to limited staff and anticipated high attendance, people may experience limited restroom access.

The mayor will continue to consider public health indicators and work closely with the local public health authority to make decisions regarding additional restrictions that could be imposed.

In the event of inclement weather, the show will be postponed to July 5.

TESPA files new pipeline lawsuit

Landowner alleges water impacted by spill of drilling fluid

By Dalton Sweat
The Wimberley View

The Trinity Edwards Springs Protection Association (TESPA), acting on behalf of Blanco County landowners whose water was impacted in a spill of drilling fluid, has filed a lawsuit in federal court against the Permian Highway Pipeline and Kinder Morgan.

The case alleges violations of the federal Safe Drinking Water Act, which protects “underground sources of drinking water” by prohibiting the injection of “contaminants” into underground drinking water.

“That is exactly what occurred on March 28, 2020, when Kinder Morgan’s PHP constructors made serious error as they attempted to drill under the Blanco River and pumped 36,000 gallons of ‘AMC Gel’ drilling fluid into the aquifer,” a press release from TESPAsaid.

Kinder Morgan said that the lawsuit doesn’t have any merit.

“The claim that PHP has violated the Safe Drinking Water Act is unfounded and without merit,” Kinder Morgan said in a statement. “The same metals in question naturally exist in the very earth that this groundwater is flowing through, and they are naturally present there at levels that are orders of magnitude higher than the concentrations present in the drilling mud used at the Blanco River site.”

Property owner Teri Albright said that her drinking water was normally “bountiful” and “pristine.” Then, in late March, that changed suddenly as the water came out looking like mud.

“We didn’t know why that was going on,” Albright said. “It had never happened in the years we had been there. I went around the house and checked all the other faucets, and we had the same stuff coming out of every faucet. We are on a well and that is our sole source of water to our property ... For this to happen it was extremely alarming.”

Albright said that the company did not notify anyone of the spilled fluid “until our Facebook pictures got out” and that her water is still undrinkable now 75 days after the incident occurred.

“For Kinder Morgan to have been negligent enough to pump through into a karst feature and to keep pumping mud even after they realized they were not getting return and to not tell us about it, they violated our livelihood, our lifestyle, our home, our value of our property,” Albright said. “...It is like they came onto our property and set a match to our house. It is a criminal violation of our property and our rights as homeowners along the Blanco River.”

The drinking water was tested by the Lower Colorado River Authority, according to Jeff Mundy, an attorney for TESPAsaid. He said that there were seven carcinogens found, including arsenic.

“It is called AMC gel drilling fluid mix,” Mundy said. “The manufacturer says this material is a human carcinogen. Why is Kinder Morgan telling the community this stuff is not hazardous? The manufacturer says it is a carcinogen. The International Agency for Research on Cancer, the premier cancer research organization in the entire world, has said there is no safe level for exposure to human carcinogens. None.”

TESPA said that the testing showed two additives, Acrylamide and Silica, which are recognized as human carcinogens. It also said that subsequent testing of the AMC gel mix “found it to contain several metals such as Aluminum, Arsenic, Barium, Chromium, Lead, Manganese and other metals, five of which are Class 1 human carcinogens.”

Kinder Morgan said that the metals found in the drinking water do not exceed the Safe Water Drinking Act.

“As with any muddy mixture of earthen material and water, we can all agree that undiluted drilling mud isn’t drinking water,” Kinder Morgan said in a statement. “However, under this group’s own experiment, once the drilling mud was diluted to the Total Suspended Solid (TSS) levels detected in the Albright well on its cloudiest day, there was no exceedance of the Safe Drinking Water Act. It is also important to note that AMC Gel, commonly referred to as Bentonite, is certified safe and appropriate by the international standards authority NSF International for use in drilling water wells.”

Mundy stated that the lawsuit has many facets, including requesting the $57,317 per day fine for contaminating drinking water. While the property owners are asking for financial relief for their loss in property value, this fine would be paid to the federal government. Among the other requests in the lawsuit, TESPAsaid is asking the courts to force Kinder Morgan to clean up the spill and ban them from using this type of drilling fluid in the general area.

“The water under a person’s property is a person’s property right,” Mundy said. “... This case will be one of the first ones to seek recovery for damage to that water estate separate from the surface estate.”

TESPA’s request for an injunction includes asking courts to require Kinder Morgan to “immediately cease operations and implement appropriate steps to prevent any further illegal discharge of fluids.”

Construction continues throughout the 430-mile pipeline project, but it is on hold at areas where it is crossing the Blanco River.

“Drilling activities at the (Horizontal Directional Drilling) site of the Blanco River remain suspended as we evaluate alternative measures for crossing the river,” Kinder Morgan said. “Other construction activities on the pipeline and compressor stations are continuing as planned and we are over 65 percent mechanically complete on the entire project. We have been in close contact with concerned landowners to address their needs, offering food, clean water and other accommodations.”

David Baker, executive director of the Wimberley Valley Watershed Association, said that his organization’s fight against the pipeline will continue.

“We can not risk it. We cannot take all the risk and let Kinder Morgan take all the profit,” Baker said. “... Our region is at stake. We are not going to back down.”

Kerrville museum hosts Gene Zesch exhibition

An exhibition for Mason sculptor Gene Zesch’s expressive works began Friday, June 19 at the Museum of Western Art in Kerrville.

A membership reception will be held from 5:30-8 p.m. Friday, June 26. Members will have the opportunity to meet Zesch and several of the L.D. (Brink) Brinkman family, whose works remain up in two of the museum’s main galleries.

Zesch’s works will be on display until Aug. 1.

The 88-year-old “definitive sculptor of Texas ranching life” is featuring his 62-piece collection, “Looks Like We’ll Just Have to Tighten Our Belts Again.” Included in the collection are 57 wood/mixed media and five bronzes, all inspired by ranch life as Zesch knew it while growing up on a Central Texas ranch.

“The museum is thrilled to be able to feature an exhibition of works from this legendary Texas Hill Country artist,” said the museum’s executive director, Darrell Beauchamp. “His works have been enjoyed for decades by presidents, governors and Texas hard scrabble farmers and ranchers.

“Everyone can relate to Gene’s wonderful work, exacting carving style, and keen sense of humor. It is an honor to host this exceptional show here in Kerrville.”

The Museum of Western Art is located at 1550 Bandera Hwy., Kerrville, and is open Tuesdays through Saturdays.

present the reopening of the terminal building,” Gillespie County Airport Manager Tony Lombardi said. “The board wants to go back to 24-hour access to the building.”

Lombardi emphasized that he unable to be there 24-hours a day and therefore he is unable to monitor proper social distancing inside the facility.

The building is cleaned twice a week, but Lombardi said he cannot guarantee the safety of the people gathering inside.

Commissioners agreed to reopen the facility to its normal operating functions.

Lease extension
Commissioners approved

a five-year lease extension with the Texas A&M University System. The building is located near the airport and primarily used as a research center. The property includes a three-acre tract and a one-acre tract.

In May, when the lease originally expired, commissioners sought to combine the leases for both properties, but the university system chose not to do that.

“At that time, we thought it would be in our best interest to consolidate the leases but, long story short, they decided they didn’t want to go that route,” Gillespie County Judge Mark Stroehrer said.

At that time, commissioners agreed to a three-month extension.

On Monday, the commissioners agreed to another five-year lease, increasing the rent rate to six cents per square foot.

Rent will be collected on an annual basis and the lease will expire in August 2025. The total cost is $7,840 per year.

“They wanted an option to review it at that expiration for another five-year term at the same rate but we told them we would have to negotiate with them at that time,” Stroehrer said.

MY 2 CENTS

Penny McBride

Turn down the volume, be part of the solution

When I was 20-something, a person I very much admired professionally asked me to accompany him on a day trip to look at some developing tourism products of interest to us both.

I was excited by what we would see and who we may meet, but I mostly looked forward to having some uninterrupted time with this well-known industry expert who was always a gracious mentor to me.

He was great at asking insightful questions and almost without realizing it, I spent more than an hour of our drive time telling him about my frustration with finding funding for my work. He is also a thoughtful listener, rarely interrupting other than to ask even more questions.

When I had said my peace, it was his turn. To my surprise, he told me that I could continue to whine and live within the current confines which were unlikely to change, or I could get off my (I'll say bum) and create my own rules.

It was not the answer I expected and for a while we rode in silence. He probably thought I was pouting, and maybe for a moment I was. As a young leader, it had never occurred to me to change the narrative. To turn away from that which was immovable and create an alternative that could be won. Soon, my brain was on fire.

I finally broke the silence by asking, "Like what?" I will never forget his warm smile and a small wink when he affectionately replied, "You tell me!"

The rest of our drive time was spent brainstorming ideas, using his expertise to pepper the conversation with lots of "what ifs" and "whys" to push my thinking and help me assess possibilities. Truth be told, I was never completely successful in finding a whole new funding mechanism for my work. What I gained that day was far more valuable.

Individually and as a society, we are living in frustrating times with broad layers of raw and ugly tension beyond what many (maybe even any) of us have experienced before. There is a noisiness to the world, that to me sounds rather deafening, but we have to hear it as a collective call to action.

First, I think we have to figure out how to turn down the volume to a manageable level. For me, it means filtering out that which is

New day, new challenges

By Julia Maenius
Standard-Radio Post reporter

The Texas Hill Country has benefitted from the production of wool and mohair sacks by Woolsacks, a family owned business, since its opening in 1982.

The Koock family has provided wool bags for the state of Texas since 1868 with the opening of Koockville, a hardware and wool bag shop in Mason.

"When I came to Fredericksburg, I knew how to buy burlap and import it from India and Bangladesh," said Timothy Koock, founder of Woolsacks. "I started finding out all of the companies were using burlap bags for wool and mohair."

Competing with the four other wool warehouses in town, Koock began his production in Houston before acquiring the building used to store oil as a part of Quality Peanut Co.

"Gary Pyka was one of my first employees," Koock said. "He and his mother really helped get the business up and running."

Woolsacks benefitted from their exemption of the duty tax on imported wool and expanded their market to the entire state by giving the local ranches and farms access to the Texas market.

"Sheep and mohair growers in Texas and the United States benefitted the most," Koock said. "We specialize in the wool business, and they know they can trust us for a classic, quality wool bag."

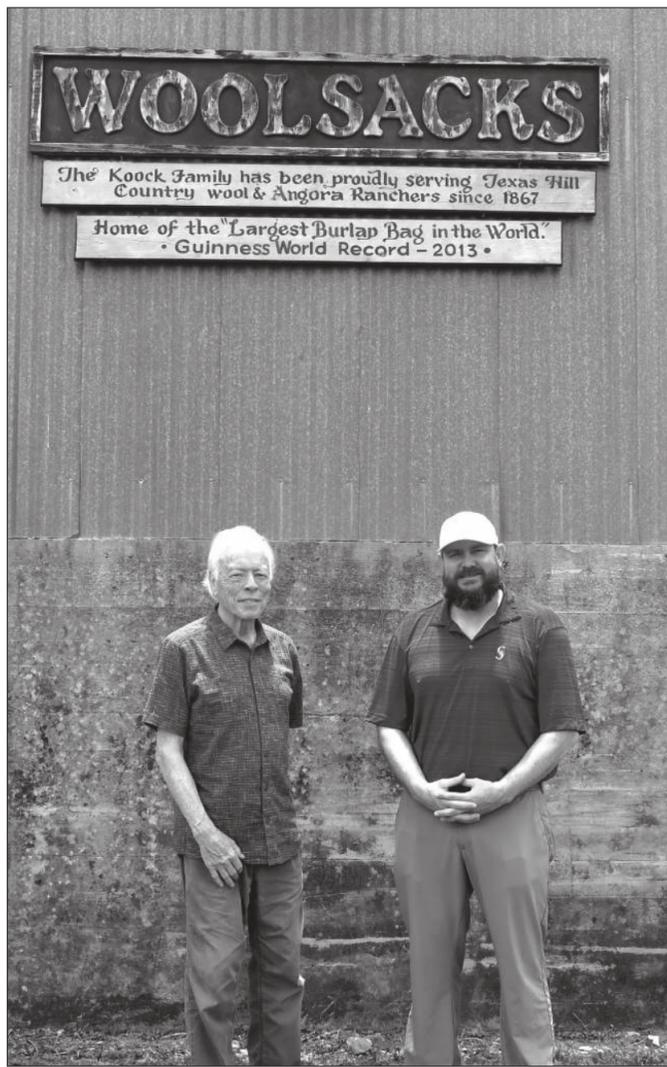

Over its 40-year tenure, Woolsacks has acquired the production of wool and mohair sacks to be distributed across the entire country.

"We were producing a good hand-cut, hand-folded, hand-sewn, hand-folded, hand-baled classic wool bag," Koock said. "That is what people began to depend on that we could do better than anybody else."

New buyer

At the end of the 40th year in business, Koock made the decision to sell his company.

Koock was put in touch with Texas Business Buyers, a company out of Kerrville that specializes in selling businesses, and attended a workshop held by the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce on how to sell a business.

Timothy Koock sold his wool and mohair sack company Woolsacks to Tom Gromus after 40 years of business. Gromus and Koock will continue to produce wool and mohair sacks for the county and the nation. —Standard-Radio Post/Julia Maenius

"Within the first week, we had five qualified buyers, and it turned out to be a great slate of potential buyers," Koock said. "When Tom Gromus told me he grew up near a dairy farm, I thought this guy knows how to work."

After interviewing all five candidates, Koock sold Woolsacks to Gromus.

"I really could not have prayed for a better situation," Koock said. "The qualities Tom brings to Woolsacks is exactly what is needed at this time after 40 years to learn the business and understand what we do now."

Now working together, with Koock as a consultant, Gromus has kept all the original employees and continued the relationships with customers.

"It felt like the right fit, and Timothy and I gelled from the beginning," Gromus said. "Woolsacks, from the beginning, felt right. The business side of it was very interesting to me."

Expanding products

Gromus has begun to expand Woolsacks' production to reach

Woolsacks brings in new owner but deals with market, tariffs markets in sand bags, grass seed expansion, the paper bag business and industrial hemp for ranchers' bags.

"The wool market is not getting any bigger in the U.S., so our expansion will be finding other uses for burlap and other ranching uses," Gromus said. "Maintaining what we have and meeting the wool industry's needs and seeing where we could go in other industries will be our focus."

Once the Trump administration implemented the Section 301 Tariff, the large percentage of Texas wool imported from China has been taxed an additional 15%.

Woolsacks is the only company that imports the international standard for wool, Nylon-Wool Pack, making them qualify to be taxed an additional $39,000 by this tariff for its annual imports.

Gromus realized this tariff would cause trickle-down taxing, resulting in extra fees being placed on ranchers and farmers providing the wool.

"Tom had a keen sense of continuity and what Woolsacks means to our customers throughout the country," Koock said. "He wanted to maintain that while at the same time, innovate and see what we could do in this year of 2020."

Tariff challenges

As a result of the wool industry becoming a struggling market, Woolsacks has been exempt from other import tariffs, but the Section 301 Tariff does not allow the business an exemption.

"If Apple can be excluded for the Apple Watch, then why not Woolsacks?" Gromus said.

Gromus has been in contact with the Texas Farm Bureau, congressmen and women and United States trade representatives to exclude Woolsacks and the struggling wool market from the additional tariff fees.

"Whatever tree bears some fruit, I will shake it," Gromus said. "We decided we are going to take up the bold fight against the government."

Gromus submitted an exclusion request on Feb. 7 and will continue the Woolsacks production with Koock.

"What I represent, and what Tom is filling the shoes of very well, is the tradition," Koock said. "The Koocks have been in this industry, selling wool and mohair bags, since 1868 and we do that same thing today."

Visitor services in the new world

During this pandemic, the staff of the Fredericksburg Convention and Visitor Bureau (FCVB) continues to operate under the guidelines set forth by our elected officials and the medical community to help maintain the health of the residents of our community, our state and our country.

At the Fredericksburg Visitor Information Center (VIC) and our offices, we are practicing the protocols outlined in the Governor's Plan to Open Texas. We want our guests — both visitors and local residents — to feel comfortable and safe when visiting our facility.

We are practicing social distancing throughout the building.

We have shortened the hours the VIC is open to the public to allow staff time to clean frequently touched surfaces. We are asking visitors to limit the number of people in their party who enter the VIC. We have floor decals to promote social distancing as visitors wait to talk to a travel counselor.

FCVB Notes

Currently, the DVD presentation on Fredericksburg and Gillespie County in our theater is not available for viewing by visitors.

A plexiglass screen at the front desk provides protection for our staff and our visitors. If FCVB staff leave the area protected by the plexiglass screen and go out into the public lobby, masks are required for our employees. Masks are encouraged for visitors to the lobby. If a visitor forgot their face covering and is seeking one, the FCVB will provide a disposable mask free of charge.

We are providing — in multiple locations — hand sanitizer manufactured by Garrison Brothers Distillery in Hye.

For the immediate future, we are providing information to our visitors in the form of an "express packet" to eliminate visitor contact with our brochure racks which are covered up. The fabric covers promote various travel experiences around Texas such as the piney forests of East Texas, the ocean environment of the Gulf Coast, the mountains of West Texas, the cattle ranches of the Panhandle, deer hunting, vineyards, barbecue, dark skies and more. Never miss a safe opportunity for travel inspiration, right?

We are highlighting our website (VisitFredericksburgTX.com) as the complete, up-to-date and touchless resource for visiting our destination. Updates are made daily by our staff.

As the FCVB re-enters the tourism marketplace, we will continue to investigate and implement ways to promote health and safety, as well as manage the tourism industry in Fredericksburg and Gillespie County.

Finally, we also recognize and understand the urgent need to promote and support the small businesses throughout our community that provide the jobs that underpin the economic well-being of hundreds of families in our community.

It is a new world, indeed, for providing visitor services. Our COVID-19-influenced world is filled with logistical challenges and heartache, but also with opportunities for improvements in our community and the travel industry if we work together.

Loeffler is the president and CEO of the Fredericksburg Convention and Visitor Bureau.

Fredericksburg Standard

FHS ace continues journey

By Barbara Boxleitner
Standard-Radio Post correspondent

Riggs Threadgill has been weighing his baseball options. After a strong spring pitching for the McLennan Community College baseball team, the Fredericksburg High School graduate said he has been considering whether to return to the school or join a Division I program.

The sophomore transferred to McLennan after making 11 relief appearances as a freshman for Louisiana State University, which he said "wasn't the best fit for me."

He finished the shortened spring season with a 3-1 record and 4.03 earned run average in six outings, including five starts. He threw 29 innings and had 30 strikeouts, both team highs. "I was very happy about my progression," he said.

The 6-foot-4 right-hander struck out a season-high 10 over seven no-hit innings to earn the win during a start against Alvin Community College. Teammate Daniel Cole

Former Billies baseball leader earns all-star nod

By Joshua McKinney
Standard-Radio Post sports editor

Former players and Texas baseball figures honored one of Fredericksburg's top coaches.

David Mayfield, a long-time baseball coach at Fredericksburg High School, received one of the Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association's All-Star Game's coaching spots.

The game was canceled but it didn't stop a group of Mayfield's players from recognizing his work during a gathering Saturday.

"It was quite an honor," Mayfield said. "I keep telling everybody that the committee must have run out of names before they picked me."

THSBCA Hall of Fame coach Diz Reeves presented Mayfield with a ring commemorating his selection in front of former players and their families.

Mayfield guesses about 30 former players were there, with Jeff Stehling, an FHS class of 1979 graduate who played on Mayfield's first team, as the oldest and 1996 grad Jeremy Ottmers as the youngest.

Mayfield started as an assistant at FHS in 1978, working under long-time St. Mary's coach Tony Knopp for one year.

"I learned more from Tony in one year than I did for the rest of my life," Mayfield said.

Mayfield took over in 1979 and led the Billies for 16 years before calling it a career in 1994.

The Billies won five district championships during his tenure, advanced to the post-season seven times and made

Scholarships available for FTC Summer Youth Camp

Fredericksburg Theater Company has announced the availability of multiple scholarships for the Fredericksburg Theater Academy's Summer Youth Camp.

This year students will perform in the junior version of the Broadway musical, "Disney's The Lion King."

Students from third grade to high school senior are accepted.

"All of us at FTC understand that these are difficult times financially for some parents," said Steve Reily, FTC executive director. "I want everyone to know that scholarships are available. We will never deprive a child the opportunity to experience the joy of live theater."

For the eighth year in a row, the FTA youth production will be part of FTC's main stage season.

"We are excited to have the youth theater as part of our 24th season," said Reily. "Audiences can expect to see the same high quality in this production that you see in all of FTC's shows. We will spare no creative expense. The sets, costumes, lighting and sound will all be of the standard you are accustomed to seeing."

"We are taking extra precautions that conform to our new guidelines as dictated by the state and federal authorities," he said. "These new policies and procedures for our summer camp are available to download and read from our website at fredericksburghtheater.org."

Reily said, "If a parent has any questions, I ask that they reach out to me by calling the theater office."

COVID-19 CASES

the last few weeks.

"The health and safety of all those we serve is our top priority," a spokesman said. "By implementing face mask protocols, we can help protect the community. We also recognize that if we are not proactive with these precautions, we run the risk of marring our community's positive reputation."

Neither city nor county officials have acted on the request.

State response

Texas Gov. Greg Abbott spoke to the press on Monday, noting the increased number of virus cases across the state. He stopped short of instituting an order to wear masks.

House Speaker Dennis Bonnen emphasized the importance of wearing facial coverings.

"It's time to mask up. It's time to employ personal responsibility — a key tenet of ensuring liberty and freedom. It's time to stand up to the mask naysayers who speak loudly but act irresponsibly as they destroy the liberty and freedom, we ALL deserve," Bonnen said.

The Texas Education Agency was expected to make an announcement Tuesday on how schools should operate in the fall.

Preventing the spread

Gillespie County Judge Mark Stroehrer urges the community members to self-monitor for symptoms, practice social distancing, wear masks or other face coverings and stay home if sick.

In addition:

- Wash hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds. If soap and water is not available, use an alcohol-based sanitizer with at least 60% alcohol;
- Avoid touching eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands;

- Avoid close contact with those who are sick;
- Cover coughs and sneezes with a tissue, then wash hands;
- Clean and disinfect frequently touched surfaces and objects.

Testing

The Texas Military Department conducted its third mobile testing unit on Tuesday in Fredericksburg.

As of press time, 131 tests had been completed and another 30-plus were expected to be done by end of day.

Those wishing to be tested at a mobile testing site must register online at txcovidtest.org or by calling 512-883-2400.

A screening process will be in place and administered by state health department personnel trained to gather information and assess symptoms which could suggest that a person should be tested for COVID-19.

Anyone with the primary symptoms of COVID-19, including fever or chills, dry or productive cough, fatigue, body aches, muscle or joint pain, shortness of breath, sore throat, headaches, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, nasal congestion, or loss of taste and/or smell, are encouraged to be tested.

Those being tested will remain in their vehicle and be administered the test without leaving their automobile.

Once results are available, patients will receive a text message with a link to a portal with results and information.

Those that test positive will also be contacted by their local health department.

For more information, visit dshs.texas.gov/coronavirus.

SEVEN HILLS

At this point, Murphree couldn't provide a date as to when the project will break ground.

"I could say any date right now and it wouldn't be right," Murphree said. "I can't provide a date until we finish the balance of the equity."

Murphree said he would be able to provide more information on the project after July 10.

About the project

The Seven Hills Resort and Conference Center is a hotel that was approved by the city council in February 2018. It is projected to be built at U.S. Highways 290 West and 87 North.

At that time, the hope was to break ground by 2018.

However, due to slower than expected investment funding, the groundbreaking was delayed.

He acts as the groundskeeper for the baseball field he helped built in 1986 and considers a "member of his family."

Mayfield planted the first seeds of grass at FHS' current home and started working on planting ivy along the outfield wall in 2017.

He also works with FHS baseball players during the offseason, spending three days a week from October to February getting the Billies ready for the upcoming season.

It's a favor for FHS' current coach, Derrick Dietrich, who played under Mayfield in the 1980s.

"Derrick is a great, great coach and he's the key to the school's success," Mayfield said. "He's the right man for the job. He makes quality players."

Mayfield credits the class of 1983 for growing the Battlin' Billies baseball program.

Among the class of 1983 players were Michael Friederich, a Houston Astros second-round pick in 1983 and one of two players in FHS history drafted straight out of high school; Tony Faz, the first-ever baseball captain for Schreiner in Kerrville and FHS' first THSBCA all-star; Darren Schneider and Danny Flores.

All four started as freshman and set the tone for FHS baseball under Mayfield's turn.

"They set the foundation for whatever success may have occurred going forward the next 15 years," Mayfield said. "Every little kid in town grew up wanting to be like those guys."

did not allow any hits in tossing the final two innings.

"The catcher and I were on the same page the whole game," Threadgill said. "I felt like I was able to command my pitches."

He throws the two- and four-seam fastball, circle changeup and slider.

He developed the change-up at LSU and said "it's become one of my primary pitches."

Threadgill cited his improved mental approach, notably the value of having a routine, for his effective spring, when he said his velocity topped at 95 mph.

"I've taken a leap in my mental game," he said. "You can visualize yourself and how you can beat the hitters. Preparation has been the key for me. All your pitches get better. You're super locked in."

Scouts from Major League Baseball clubs have been eyeing him and his teammates since the fall, when he was among players to meet with club representatives. He sometimes receives phone calls from them.

"They just want to maintain that relationship," he said.

Since the spring shutdown, he has been throwing five days a week and doing cardio workouts three days a week.

He throws a bullpen session of 35 to 40 pitches on Fridays and has even thrown to live hitters.

"That's the day I tax my arm the most," he said.

He said he has received interest from coaches of Division I schools mainly in Texas.

Fighting a rare disease

Boy, family learning to adapt to rare skin disorder

By Michael Booth

From the moment of Brady Attar's arrival into this world, as a beautiful baby boy who somehow had startling skin lesions covering his body even before his cord was cut, his family had much to learn.

Eileen and Chris Attar had their second boy at one of the best children's hospitals in Texas, and yet the expert who could teach them the most about extremely rare Epidermolysis Bullosa was hundreds of miles away in Austin.

It would be days and weeks before they fully understood, still in shock, that "EB" was a genetic disorder that in severe versions weakens skin and soft membranes to the point where patients like Brady have new raw wounds every day. And with no cure, EB doesn't end.

In those first weeks, Eileen says now, "I couldn't believe it, such denial. There's just no way this could exist, that it could be this hard. How will I do this every day of my life from here on out?"

Three and a half years later, the Attars are themselves teaching some of the top clinicians and stem cell researchers in the world how families live with EB and where the first treatment breakthroughs might come. Having uprooted their family to Colorado in search of expertise, they spend a lot of time sharing their own knowledge with Gates Center researchers and Dr. Anna Bruckner, director of the Children's Hospital Colorado EB Center of Excellence and her team. The Attars and other EB families from a multi-state region visit the clinic regularly for treatment because it's one of the few of its kind in the nation.

On any given day, Eileen might tell Dr. Bruckner that Brady's EB leaves him longing to taste ice cream, but unable on some days to even swallow water. Hours later, Eileen and Chris might sit at a table for an update with Gates Center Ph.D.s working assiduously toward EB cures, and explain how EB lesions close up the throat.

"We are so thankful," Eileen said of the research meeting, "that they keep us in their brains while they do what they are doing."

The close integration and interaction of basic scientific research, treatment development and production, and world-leading clinical knowledge are what has come to distinguish the Gates Center and the Anschutz Medical Campus from many other academic hubs in the nation. In rare and highly specialized disciplines such as EB, only a few locations can offer families and researchers the combination of hands-on treatment and exploration of the underlying causes.

Three Gates Center researchers are at the forefront of EB exploration, including Gates Center Director Dennis Roop, Ph.D.; Ganna Bilousova, Ph.D., assistant professor of dermatology at the School of Medicine; and Igor Kogut, Ph.D., also an assistant professor of dermatology at the School of Medicine. The Gates Center is one anchor of an EB iPSC Stem Cell Consortium along with Stanford University and Columbia University, a consortium that has received multiple rounds of funding from the National Institutes of Health 21st Century Cures Act. They also receive generous matching private funds (a requirement of this funding mechanism) from the EB Research Partnership in New York and the California-based EB Medical Research Foundation, which co-founded the consortium in 2016 to create the multi-institutional partnership, and the London-based Cure EB Charity.

The Colorado team has additionally received funding from the U.S. Department of Defense, the Dystrophic Epidermolysis Bullosa Research Association (DEBRA) International, the King Baudouin Foundation's Vlinderkindje Fund and the Gates Frontiers Fund.

Inspector General warning citizens of COVID scam

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Office of Inspector General is alerting the public about fraud schemes related to COVID-19.

Scammers are offering COVID-19 tests to Medicare beneficiaries in exchange for personal details, including Medicare information.

These services are unapproved and illegitimate, according to a spokesman.

Fraudsters are targeting beneficiaries in a number of ways, including telemarketing calls, text messages, social media posts and door-to-door visits.

The personal information can be used to fraudulently bill federal health care programs and commit medical identity theft.

If Medicare or Medicaid denies the claim for an unapproved test, the beneficiary could be responsible for the test.

The OIG recommends the following:

- Beneficiaries should be cautious of unsolicited requests for Medicare or Medicaid numbers;
- Be suspicious of unexpected calls or visitors offering COVID-19 testing supplies;
- Do not respond to or open links in texts about COVID-19 from unknown persons;
- Ignore offers or advertisements for COVID-19 testing or treatments on social media sites;
- A physician or other health care provider should assess conditions to approved any necessary testing;
- Do not give out personal infor-

How Are Pipelines Constructed?

A Permian Highway Pipeline Project Update

Pipelines are constructed in accordance with strict regulatory and environmental standards and industry best practices. Underground pipelines are the safest and most efficient method of transporting energy products.

1. Clearing & Grading
After the right-of-way (ROW) is carefully surveyed and staked, the ROW is graded. Top soil is carefully removed and segregated.

2. Trenching
A wheel ditcher or backhoe digs the trench for the pipeline. The bottom of the trench is then padded with sand to cushion the pipe.

3. Stringing Pipe
Each piece of pipe is laid on the ROW to ensure proper positioning prior to bending, welding and installation.

4. Field Bending Pipe
The pipe is bent, as needed, to accommodate elevation and horizontal changes.

5. Welding
The construction crew welds each section of pipe together into one continuous length.

6. Inspection & Coating
For quality assurance, technicians inspect the pipe coating prior to installation and also inspect all welds using x-rays. Each weld is then coated by a coating head.

7. Pipe Lowering
Sidebooms move together to gently lower the welded pipeline into the trench.

8. Padding & Backfill
The pipe trench is backfilled and graded.

9. Hydrostatic Testing
The pipeline is filled with water and pressurized to ensure the pipe's integrity and that it is fit for service.

10. Restoration
The pipe trench and land within the ROW are contoured and revegetated. The landowner may continue using the ROW for most purposes after restoration.

The challenges of the coronavirus continue

Changing situation complicates reporting, but we can all do better to stop virus' spread

Readers, we are doing our darndest to bring you an accurate picture of this county's challenges with the novel coronavirus. Dealing with different information sources, lag time between different agency reporting and a constantly changing information picture has its challenges.

But know that we are not “glorifying” the virus, advocating for maximum governmental orders or trying to present a “gloom and doom” picture. This is a serious illness, and it deserves coverage and whatever tips we can offer to halt its spread in our community. It is mostly spread by respiratory means and, to date, it has claimed the lives of 120,000 Americans and killed 465,000 worldwide.

We check with state websites, which are often a day behind what communities know. (We had planned to add recoveries to a graph last week, but at press time, checked the DSHS website and no information about recoveries at that time.)

We have posted near daily stories about COVID-19.

Some say we don't celebrate the recoveries and only report negative news. Not all recoveries are like getting over a cold. There are often extensive hospital stays and lingering effects.

Also, we think 120,000 deaths throughout America is gloomy and deserving of reporting. We feel for our vulnerable populations, particularly the elderly, who have had to remain isolated while we clamor to get back to normal.

Let's remember that 100-plus years ago, the Spanish Flu epidemic cost 50 million lives worldwide and remained a health threat for almost two years.

Texas House Speaker Dennis Bonnen on Monday had a strong reaction after Governor Greg Abbott's talk about the spike in cases. Regardless if one is a fan of Bonnen or not, his frank talk needs more airing in today's Texas:

“I have become increasingly infuriated by so-called advocates who are ditching the mask in the middle of a pandemic as an expression of freedom and liberty, while expressly killing the freedoms and liberties we cherish: The liberty and freedom to go to work. The liberty and freedom to have customers that keep you in business. The liberty and freedom of going to churches, restaurants and concerts with your family and friends. The liberty and freedom of sending your kids off to school. The liberty and freedom of a thriving economy for everyone.

“If these so-called patriots persist in flaunting their disregard for others, we're in for a very long, dark summer with a deadly array of medical and economic consequences — not because of government restrictions, but because these agitators have fueled uncertainty and fear within decent and responsible individuals who understand the health risks and the consequences of our medical resources being strained beyond capacity.

“It's time to mask up. It's time to employ personal responsibility — a key tenet of ensuring liberty and freedom. It's time to stand up to the mask naysayers who speak loudly but act irresponsibly as they destroy the liberty and freedom we ALL deserve.”

We can't say it any better than that.

So, we all know what to do to halt this spread, right?

Experts today are less concerned about the virus spread through surface contact, food and outdoors, and more concerned about respiratory spread by close interactions between people.

It's time to stop neglecting the recommended precautions as we see our Lone Star State's cases spike again, setting new daily infection records. Just because businesses have reopened again doesn't mean we can ignore all advice from medical professionals.

And we know our older citizens and their loved ones are tired of feeling like they need to isolate. The least we can do is give them a hand to help stop the spread.

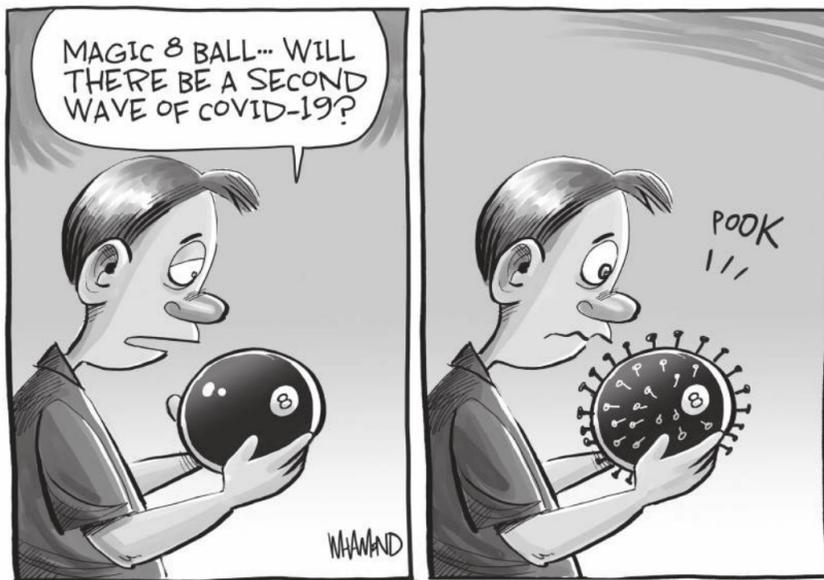

The dangers of this virus are still front and center and the risks of spread are still with us. As far as we have come to halt it and get back to business, it would be awful to allow it to shut everything down again. Let's do what we can now and sacrifice so that one day we can all look back on this episode as a distant memory.

HELP STOP THE SPREAD

• Wearing a mask is the easiest and single most important thing we can do to halt the spread. This is a respiratory illness that is spread by droplets caused from coughing or sneezing, and experts say masks help stop the spread.

- Wash hands with soap and water for 20 seconds.
- Avoid touching eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands.
- Cover mouth when coughing or sneezing.
- Put hand-shaking on hold when greeting.
- Continue to clean and disinfect surfaces and objects handled by someone else.
- Maintain physical distance — at least 3 feet, but preferably 6 — whenever possible.
- Replace in-person meetings with online when possible.
- Stay home if you do not feel well.

Would you sign a blank check?

GUEST COLUMN

By Eric Hammersen

Most people would answer that question with a resounding “no” — they want to know how much, for what, why and who will benefit from the use of their money. But if you think your obligation to participate in your local government ends once you voted, you are signing a blank check.

Voting is critically important. Elected officials — national, state, county and city — are the ones who adopt laws and ordinances. But much of the day-to-day running of government at every level is done by unelected officials. Having been in government for many years, I know the vast majority are conscientious, well-meaning citizens who work hard every day to make sure the wheels stay on the bus. However, their job descriptions do not include putting themselves out of business or cutting your taxes or the indirect cost of doing business.

One of the joys of living in Fredericksburg is that it is still small enough that citizens can get involved, and you do not have to run for public office to do so. City and county officials, both paid staff and volunteers who serve on boards, want and need your interest and input. Texas' open government laws mean that public meetings are accessible (in-person normally; via Zoom for now). But they will not stop doing their work just because you were too busy to attend or provide input.

Last year, dozens of citizens attended meetings at city hall and the courthouse to protest raising taxes — but few had attended earlier meetings when the budgets were established. Once budgets are set, determining the property tax rate became a mathematical drill. Same thing for school board meetings, whether or not you have children in local schools. School taxes are the largest percentage of your property tax bill — so you should attend to find out how your money is spent.

Every month, there is a “Coffee with the City Manager” session where citizens can voice ideas and concerns. Rarely do more than 20-25 people attend.

The Historical Review Board meets monthly, but few attend unless they have a project under review (and then often seem surprised by the requirements they face).

As an example of how you can participate, the city's Historical Preservation Officer is working with a team of contractors to revise the Historic District Design Guidelines. The draft document moves from the advisory guidelines found in the current (1997) version to regulatory standards that introduce the words “required” and “prohibited” (used more than 270 times). This will impact every builder and property owner, and not just in the current Historic District.

The document expands what can be deemed a historically significant building to anything constructed before 1970 (e.g., 50-plus years old) anywhere in the city. The Historic Preservation Officer posted the draft Design Guidelines & Standards on the city's website and hosted two Zoom meetings to discuss them. Only eight people attended. With such low turnout, the city staff might think the proposed changes are of little concern.

Next year, if a property owner discovers that they are now prohibited from making a change to their home or required to spend thousands more than they expected, they should expect little sympathy if they were not willing to take the time to read the draft and then provide their input as it was being considered.

The County Commissioners will meet on June 23, 24, 25 and 26 (at 9 a.m. each day in the courthouse) for their annual budget workshops.

City Council will meet on July 6 at the Hill Country University Center and a proposed budget will be brought to the council in July. Imagine what might happen if 500 or 1,000 people attended, and asked “how much,” “for what,” “why,” and “who benefits?”

Take the time to attend meetings of the city council, county commissioners, school board and other boards. Provide your input when given the opportunity to do so.

Otherwise, you are signing a blank check — which will be cashed at some point in the future.

Hammersen grew up in El Paso and first came to Fredericksburg in 1974, when his parents moved here. After more than 50 years of service in the Army and Department of Defense, he retired and relocated to Fredericksburg in January 2019.

State says schools will open in fall

AUSTIN — While COVID-19 testing, contact tracing, case counts, hospitalizations and deaths increased last week, more and more Texans ventured out of their homes with the deadly coronavirus showing no sign of abatement.

Gov. Greg Abbott recently renewed his COVID pandemic disaster declaration for all counties affected by the disease. Even so, Abbott and Texas Education Commissioner Mike Morath on June 18 sounded a hopeful note, saying schools would resume normal operations in the fall. “It will be safe for Texas public school students, teachers and staff to return to school campuses for in-person instruction this fall, but there will also be flexibility for families with health concerns so that their children can be educated remotely, if the parent so chooses,” said Morath, adding that detailed guidance would be issued soon.

Texas State Teachers Association President Noel Candelaria reacted, saying teachers and other school employees “need to be directly involved in planning for the safe reopening of school facilities” and a rush to reopen schools puts at risk the health and safety of millions of Texas school children, educators, families and communities.

Meanwhile, Gov. Abbott and Dr. John Zervas, University of Texas System executive vice chancellor for health affairs, on June 16 said the Lone Star State's hospital capacity can accommodate an uptick in COVID-19 cases.

In related news, the governor's office on June 15 released a new public service announcement titled “Wear A Mask On And Off The Field.” In the PSA, Dallas Cowboys linebacker Jaylon Smith says: “I wear a face mask every single day on the football field to protect myself. Now I'm switching it up to a different mask to protect myself and others around me. As we open up Texas, it's crucial that we all do our part in this fight against COVID-19. So when you leave the house, make sure you wash your hands, make sure you practice social distancing, and last but not least, wear a mask. You be safe. Go Cowboys.”

Paxton reacts to ruling

Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton expressed his disappointment with the U.S. Supreme Court's June 18 ruling to uphold the Obama administration's 2012 Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program.

The case, Department of Homeland Security et al. v. Regents of the University of California et al., was brought to the high court via the San Francisco-based 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Paxton said he looks forward to litigating the same issue, the constitutionality of the Obama administration's action creating the program, in a case now pending in a South Texas U.S. district court.

As of Dec. 31, 2019, some 107,000 Texans were counted by the federal government as DACA recipients, meaning they have applied and been cleared to reside in the U.S.

Jobless rate decreases

The Texas Workforce Commission announced that in May, Texas's unemployment rate dropped to 13.0%, the first decrease recorded since March, when COVID-19 sent a robust economy on a downward trajectory.

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

LOOKING BACK AT ...

70 Miles of Bad Road

A trip by car from Fredericksburg to San Antonio in the early 20th century was not undertaken on a whim. In fact, "trip" was too simple a word to describe the experience. It was a journey filled with surprises around every turn, attempted only by eccentric adventurers who enjoyed living dangerously.

Before World War I, most Hill Country roads were horrible. There were few bridges. Cars were unreliable and underpowered. One old timer compared a Fredericksburg to San Antonio excursion to "roller skating over the Alps."

In December 1916, Robert Penniger, editor of the Fredericksburg Standard and Wochenblatt, drove from Fredericksburg to San Antonio in a Maxwell Touring Car. Penniger described the ordeal for his readers, many of whom had never been beyond their home in the Pedernales Valley.

In those days, a smart motorist hoped for the best but prepared for the worst. For a jaunt over any distance, he packed lunch, emergency food and water, matches, blankets in the winter time, an extra can of gasoline (remember no gas stations) and all equipment needed to fix a flat tire.

On that cool December morning, the Maxwell, anticipating the coming adventure, fired miraculously on the first crank and editor Penniger rolled out on Main Street. He splashed across Barons Creek east of town, motored past the ruins of old Fort Martin Scott and then swung south following what would today be the Old San Antonio Road.

To call it a road was a stretch. It was two parallel wagon ruts. After crossing the Pedernales, the editor made good time through the bottom land, up the hill to Cain City and on to Grapetown, but upon reaching Bankersmith progress slowed dramatically. Recent rains had washed out large chunks of the road, leaving "big muds holes, rivulets and hog wallows." The car bounced along at a snail's pace, "a-bumping and a-jolting like a bucking bronco."

Terrible road conditions continued up the High Hill to the Alamo Springs Railroad Station. At the summit, Penniger saw the "polished piece of the Bear Mountain erected by the Nagel Bros. as a memento to drive carefully, else you might land in the grave yard." He hoped it wasn't a sign of things to come.

"From the summit," Penniger continued, "you can look way down into Kendall County, almost to the county seat, from where help has to come pretty soon or you never will see these sights again; the slopes of the mountain getting so bad that you will have to use a burro to get over this road."

There is a harsh beauty to the land on the back side of High Hill, but the road there was the roughest part of the journey. It was barely wide enough for a single vehicle as it zigged and zagged along the side of a steep, rocky incline.

The Maxwell was "bucking up and down hills, along a precipice that spells broken limbs if your gas wagon don't keep to the righteous and narrow path allotted for trespassing. What you can do if you meet somebody coming toward you, I don't know; luckily I've never had to find out."

Then after fording "Breite Creek, Schindel Creek, Block Creek and several other young ones that have no names yet you reach the beautiful Guadalupe River."

The crossing was 100 feet of rushing, swirling water marked by some dead trees, "and if you don't hit it just right, you will get stuck and require a foot bath, some replacement of good language and a mule team to reach August Offer's palace and refreshment emporium at Waring."

After crossing the Guadalupe in fine shape, the editor reached Boerne at noon where he stopped on the side of the road for lunch. He found the road in good repair, recently graveled, allowing him to "romp on the gas" and make good time. He reached his destination at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. For the 70-mile trip he averaged 10 mph.

"Bad roads," the editor concluded, "are propagators of bad language and are degenerative to good morals, automobiles, wagons, glassware, carriages, millinery and derby hats."

50 YEARS AGO in the Standard

JUNE 24, 1970

Record-breaking crowds attended the ninth annual Stonewall Peach JAMBoree. An estimated 10,000 people attended the parade and activities throughout the day on Saturday, as well as the rodeo on Friday evening.

Sharon Fikes was crowned the new Gillespie County Peach Queen and Christina Dyer and Corinne Nielsen were named duchesses. During the next evening's rodeo, Nancy Blount of Pittsburg was crowned Texas Peach Queen. Clifton Burg, showing Keystone peaches, swept all of the honors in the peach show.

A gala three-day celebration is planned for Fredericksburg's 4th of July Festival at the Gillespie County Fair Grounds.

An election will be held Friday on the consolidation of the Stonewall Common School District with the Fredericksburg Independent School District. Elections will be held in both districts.

Pioneer local hardware firm Otto Kolmeier and Co. has been sold to Fredericksburg Hardware, Inc. Roy Stroehrer is the president of the new corporation, and Ruben Wahl, vice president and general manager.

Jonny K. Ohlenburg has been named district conservationist with the Gillespie County Soil and Water Conservation District, succeeding Bud Smathers.

Four Boy Scouts from Gillespie County, including Dale

Pape and Eugene Whitehead from Fredericksburg and Brian Weinheimer and Bruce Weinheimer from Stonewall, are among a group from the Capitol Area Council BSA who left Tuesday for a two-week trip to Philmont Scout Ranch and Explorer Base in the Rocky Mountains of Northern New Mexico.

Esther Kolmeier and Alvin Holland were united in marriage June 20 at Zion Lutheran Church.

Karrie Ann Ellebracht, six-week-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Ellebracht, was baptized Sunday at Holy Ghost Lutheran Church.

Linda Ann Jenschke became the bride of Daniel Dean Pfister Saturday, June 20, at St. Mary's Catholic Church with the Rev. Sam Heitkamp officiating.

Two boys and three girls were born in local hospitals during the past week. Boys were born to Mr. and Mrs. Clement Gully, June 17, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Louis Duecker, June 18.

Girls were born to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Smith, Harper, June 16, and Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Rathke of Kerrville and Mr. and Mrs. Danny Leyendecker, both on June 18.

Records were broken at last Sunday's prize and pot shoot sponsored by the Grapetown Eintracht Schuetzenverein. Frank Basse, Claude Nobles and Dwight Schmidt all shot a perfect score of 60. In the shoot off, Basse shot a 28 in three rounds to claim the championship.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Weight of responsibility

When we hear about false positive tests and more cases because of more testing, how do we parse through the "data" and find truth?

Several weeks ago, Dr. Jim Partin, Hill Country Memorial chief medical officer, answered this question. He is closely tracking the number of regional COVID-19 hospitalizations as reported by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Gillespie County is in the San Antonio region, but since we border the Austin region, he looks at both to see how infections are declining/increasing. It also gives us a look at the all-important "overwhelm the healthcare system" concern.

As of June 21, the San Antonio region almost tripled in less than two weeks from about 120 to 357, and the Austin region more than doubled from about 80 to 196.

Federal, state and local officials have the unenviable task of deciding how to respond. It's a no-win scenario. They walk that line of keeping the economy open while trying to avoid a loss of life and stressing the healthcare system to the point of having to ration care.

The Greatest Generation became that way because of how they met their challenges. They sacrificed. They worked hard. They rationed. They served their neighbors.

This is our time. Wearing a mask, limiting the size of groups, and washing our hands is a small price to pay to keep our economy moving and those we love safe.

And if local elected officials should decide that, for our collective safety, it is necessary to mandate face masks in businesses when social distancing is not possible, let's get behind them.

They aren't doing it to be mean or take away civil liberties. They are doing it because they care and they feel the weight of the responsibility put upon them by their office.

'Virtual parade'

Many cities and towns have held July 4th parades. A safe alternative this year would be to create a virtual parade to honor your city or township. Folks can be encouraged to stage a safe, socially distanced, at-home or in the front or backyard gathering of those who are in their safe circles.

In a few seconds or a minute, they can record and forward their efforts to those in the city who can weave entries together into a virtual city-wide parade. If masked-up, they can even take their chairs or blankets to their usual favorite parade spot, and briefly film the family awaiting the horses or floats or cars or marchers (or the vaccine!).

If all are careful in their presentation and filming, this can allow dozens or hundreds (or dare we hope thousands?) in a community to safely gather virtually and build an online parade that will provide some bright fireworks of fun and hope.

My wife and I are happy to begin a tiny fund which cities can build on for prizes. We'll provide $20 to each of 20 winners — $400 for the Fourth. Hopefully, you'll be swamped with entries, and your city or township can augment the prizes to encourage and reward more competition.

Clearly, the true prize is the enthusiasm and community participation and pride that so many of us can benefit from at this difficult time. Whether cities and towns challenge one another or simply focus on their own residents, the hope is to create and share a virtuous and virtual and vibrant video which can illuminate the smiles we have had to mask for months!

Sorry this is late, but let the parades begin!

Forgotten God

USSR dissident and political prisoner Alexander Solzhenitsyn was awarded the Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion in 1983. His acceptance speech contains truth for our time of riots, lawlessness and general chaos; and this truth is probably even more applicable now than then.

In his speech, he describes how, when he was a child, the older people explained to him the disasters that had overtaken the Soviet Union this way: "Men have forgotten God; that is why all this has happened." Having researched and written about the communist revolution for over half a century, he concluded that the reason it was so ruinous, killing some 60 million of his fellow citizens, was the same: "Men have forgotten God; that is why all this has happened."

Is this not the case today, and even more so than then? Men have not just forgotten God. They have spent a great deal of effort trying to cancel Him.

Seeing the results, shouldn't we now more than ever beseech God for mercy, humble ourselves, seek Him and turn away from evil?

Kindness can remove fear

Fear is common, human and contagious. It steals joy, sabotages purpose for living, and damages relationships. It can lead to irrational behavior and wrongful action toward others. It fuels racism and many other forms of prejudice.

The Bible states, "For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power, love and a sound mind" (2 Timothy 1:7). He empowers us to move beyond our fears so we can accomplish what we never dreamed possible. Love motivates us to value and serve others with compassion. A sound mind allows us to think wisely and rationally so we can come to good conclusions.

Courage is not the absence of fear but the ability to act appropriately in spite of it. Several years ago, I traveled in Europe. As I boarded a train, I noticed two men covered in tattoos and pierced with spikes. I was afraid and hoped they would board another car. I prayed that I might respond in a good way. The men boarded and sat directly across the aisle from me. I found myself breaking into a broad smile saying, "How are you today?"

The younger began conversing with me while the older discouraged him, saying I probably did not wish to speak with him. Several stops later they got up to leave. The younger turned and said, "It was really nice to talk with you today. Thanks."

As I have reflected on this encounter many times since, I have realized the importance of kindness and respect. What a different world it might be if we simply acted kindly and respectfully to one another despite our differences. The changes might seem insignificant at first. However, small changes in ourselves could make the bigger changes we desire in our world increasingly possible.

'Our discontent'

It is sad that this country enters summer with a deadly pandemic afflicting young and old with no end in sight and politicians sacrificing lives for political purposes. The hardships this contagion has cost individuals, small businesses and the economy are immeasurable, and we all wish for a rapid recovery. A cure may be on the horizon so all remain hopeful.

Thousands participating in peaceful protests in cities and small communities throughout the country, and at the same time, right-wing extremists instigating civil disobedience and causing the tragic loss of lives and businesses lost to violence and race relations are fractured. A chest-pounding White House who prefers a country in turmoil threatening to kill American citizens using the standing military and supported by loyalists who pledged or have sworn fealty to an individual.

On the state level, we are being asked to choose, stand in line to vote and perhaps be sickened by a deadly disease or not voting at all because a loyalist party governor still engaging in voter suppression and not allowing voting by mail.

Total corruption and lawlessness are still the order of the day in the White House and our country is still without a leader. From Twitter rants to the press is the enemy of the people, to firing individuals who investigate corruption, and now a former National Security Advisor's

Now is the time to plant pumpkins for fall crop

Raising pumpkins, whether it is for decorations or pies, can be a fun way to introduce gardening for a family.

Even though pumpkin season is several months away, it's important to know the prime pumpkin-planting time is now.

Russ Wallace, Ph.D., Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service vegetable specialist, Lubbock, provides tips and basic requirements for residents interested in growing their own personal pumpkin patch.

Sunlight hours and temperature play an important role in how well pumpkins grow in Texas.

While too much sunlight and extremely hot weather can damage some plants, pumpkins thrive in early Texas summers.

Different varieties need various amounts of days to become completely ripe.

Gardeners should choose the planting variety based on when they plan on harvesting their pumpkins for their fall activities.

"The best time of year to plant pumpkins is from early May through June, but it also depends on the variety to be grown," Wallace said. "Some varieties mature in 85 days while others may not mature for 120 days. So those with 120 days to harvest should be planted early."

Knowing the soil in a particular area is crucial as pumpkins thrive in soils with good drainage. Without good soil, pumpkins might need a change to their water intake, explained Wallace.

If the soil in an area does not drain water well, adding organic matter such as peat moss and compost to the soil will give it better drainage.

This should allow the soil to become suitable for growing pumpkins and other plants that need good drainage.

With their growing season in the middle of Texas's hot and dry summers, it's important to keep in mind that pumpkins need a lot of water to thrive.

"Pumpkins require about 25-30 inches of rain plus irrigation," Wallace said. "They need most of their water when the fruit is developing/maturing. If water is not uniformly applied while fruit is maturing, the ends of the pumpkins may not fully develop. We see that a lot in high heat, drought conditions."

Proper watering conditions will set pumpkin plants up for successful ripening for harvest. Irrigation and good, draining soil will help a pumpkin patch thrive in Texas weather.

Improved processing capacity could mean lower beef prices at grocery stores

Wholesale beef prices are dropping as the production logjam in processing plants created by COVID-19 continues to loosen and return to normal, said a Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service expert.

David Anderson, Ph.D., AgriLife Extension economist, College Station, said wholesale beef prices were nearing last year's lows.

Choice box beef cutout, which includes large cuts of beef that represent cuts like steaks, briskets, prime chuck and roasts, peaked at $4.59 per pound as COVID-19 began affecting the nation's production capacity.

Last week, the wholesale price was $2.41 per pound and nearing the price for June 2019, $2.22 per pound.

"As packing capacity recovered, the price has come back down to Earth," he said. "Choice box beef cutout is a good representation of the wholesale value of a carcass, and so it appears that prices are returning to normal."

Anderson said individual wholesale cuts, rib-eyes for example, have also started to decline. They peaked at $11.62 per pound and have fallen to $9.52 compared to $7.83 a year ago. Chuck roasts were $6.29 per pound wholesale and have fallen to $2.57 per pound as production capacity returns.

Day-to-day beef production has surpassed 2019 numbers, which is another indication bottlenecks at processing facilities were opening, he said. But processing capacity remains below 100%.

"Prices are coming down as packers return to capacity," Anderson said. "Beef production was larger than the same week a year ago but it's because feeder cattle weights are up due to good spring conditions and producers and feedlots hanging on to cattle longer than normal."

Anderson suspects it's only a matter of time before wholesale price declines translate into lower prices for consumers at grocery stores.

Retail prices were very high as the pandemic sent shockwaves throughout the market, according to Anderson. Rushes on meat products, restaurant closures and unemployment are among the factors that contributed to a highly volatile beef market.

Last month, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported retail prices for all quality cuts averaged $7.59 per pound compared to $6.17 per pound last May.

Anderson said he expects retail prices in June and July to reflect the drop in wholesale prices.

"There's always a lag to these prices changes," he said. "It will be interesting to see where wholesale prices end up and whether the prices at grocers will be as dramatic as what we've seen with wholesale." Despite being in the heart of grilling season with the Fourth of July holiday coming up, Anderson said the economy will be the wildcard that drives beef prices — especially for ground beef, steaks, briskets and the rest.

"We still have a recession, 40 million people unemployed, falling incomes, restaurants at partial capacity and none of that is good for beef, especially high-value cuts," Anderson said. "What kind of economic recovery will we see? A V-shaped recovery is the best case, but if it's not, that means there are a lot of struggles, not just in the beef market."

The family moved to Dallas, Texas in 1954 where Steve was raised. Steve graduated from Bryan Adams High School in 1965 and attended East Texas State University. After a brief time at the university, Steve enlisted in the United States Air Force and after basic training and technology school he was stationed at Tinker Field Oklahoma, Tuy Hoas Air Base RVN and Eglin AFB Florida. After serving in the Vietnam War, he was honorably discharged and returned to East Texas State University and earned a bachelor's degree in finance and economics in 1973.

Steve joined his father's business as a leather salesman, where he discovered commission sales was not his calling. In 1976, he accepted a position as an Assistant National Bank Examiner with the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) beginning a 40-year career in the banking industry. After the OCC, Steve took a position as VP in charge of operations and loan review officer with the First National Bank in Kerrville, Texas. His career led him to the University National Bank in College Station and finally as Executive VP (EVP) and Chief lending officer with Security State Bank & Trust in Kingsland, Texas. Steve was not only a successful leader, he was a great friend and mentor to everyone he worked with, especially those at SSB&T Kingsland.

He was an avid hunter and enjoyed hosting an annual dove cook with his closest friends and family. He spent many summers taking his family camping and dragging his girls around on a tube behind his fish and ski boat on Lake Buchanan. Steve had an appreciation for a new pick-up and well-kept yard. He spent hours maintaining his estate in Fairland. Most of all, Steve was a proud husband, father, grandfather, and friend. He had many lifelong friends and will be greatly missed.

Steve is survived by his wife of 37 years, Carol (Straube) Rodgers, of Marble Falls, Texas; daughters, Jenny and Stacy Rodgers of Austin, Texas; Jackie Wanek and husband, Clay of Rosanky, Texas; Kristy Beyer and husband, Brett of Fredericksburg, Texas and great-grandchildren Brody and Kaden Beyer of Fredericksburg, Texas.

Lucille Sophie (Maurer) Scharnhorst

September 4, 1930 - June 19, 2020

Lucille Sophie (Maurer) Scharnhorst was born Sept. 4, 1930. She departed this world to be in God's Hand on June 19, 2020.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Milton Scharnhorst, on Oct. 8, 1987 and by infant granddaughter, Wendy Lynn Moore, on May 16, 1973.

She was the last living sibling of 10 children born to Adolf and Delka Maurer. She attended the Junction School located just north of Stonewall and completed the eighth grade. Many times, the mode of transportation to school for her and some of her siblings was horseback. During her early years, she worked hard on the family farm, which was owned by her parents.

She married Milton Scharnhorst on June 18, 1950. They were married for 37 years until his death in 1987. Karen and Darnell were born while they lived and worked on the Scharnhorst Ranch. They lived on the Scharnhorst Ranch in the Post Oak community until the ranch was sold in 1956.

They then moved to the Penick Ranch, where Milton was foreman and she was housewife. During this time, Janice and Keith were born.

Milton and Lucille and the four kids moved to the Buchanan Ranch in 1960. Milton was the ranch foreman, where Lucille continued to serve her husband and kids, again another example of a servant's heart.

Lucille worked in the home for many years raising her children. She went to work at St. Ferdinand's Church in 1965. She worked at the church for three years until they bought the Little Blanco Inn Restaurant in 1968. They owned and operated the Little Blanco Inn until they sold it in 1984. We have been told to mention her great barbecue sauce. They moved to Blanco and ran a rural mail route from 1984 to 1996. During this time Lucille would run the mail route and in the evening, work as a waitress at the Blanco Bowling Alley.

After she fully retired, again with her servant heart, she took communion to the homebound, was a "Candy Lady" at the nursing homes and enjoyed working at the Good Samaritan. She also volunteered at the Eagles Auxiliary, bringing joy to special needs children by assisting with Easter Egg Hunts and Halloween Parties. The friendships and service with St. Ann's Altar Society meant a great deal to her. She was also known to assist friends with rides to doctor appointments and shopping for essential items. Many friends and neighbors were recipients of homemade bread, jellies and cookies.

Family and friends were important to her. She loved her kids, grandkids and great-grandkids. Lucille never let company visit without feeding a meal or dessert, depending on the time of day the company arrived. She enjoyed inviting friends in for a drink or a visit. She always said "if you don't want me to go, don't ask me", which showed her love to travel. She got to see 38 states, Mexico and Canada. She had a servant heart and was loved by many. Her warm smile will be remembered by all who knew her.

She is survived by her children – Karen Young and husband, John, of Bulverde; Darnell Moore and husband, Bill, of Spring Branch; Janice Robson and husband, Bob, of New Braunfels; and Keith Scharnhorst and wife, Malinda, of Grandview. Grandchildren Clint Young and wife, Aarika, of Minot, North Dakota; Jamie Massingill and husband, Clint, of Kerrville; Russell Moore and wife, Cindy, of New Braunfels; Brad Moore and wife, Jessica, of Bulverde; Kolbe Moore and wife, Erika, of Bulverde; Chrissy Flores and husband, Armando, of Cibolo; Blaine Scharnhorst and wife, Jazz, of Grandview; Justin Scharnhorst and wife, Samantha, of Grandview; twelve great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Visitation was held Tuesday, June 23, from 4-7 p.m., at Crofts-Crow Funeral Home in Blanco.

The Mass of the Resurrection was held Wednesday, June 24, at 10 a.m., at St. Ferdinand's Catholic Church in Blanco, followed by burial in St. Mary's Cemetery, located in the Twin Sisters community.

In lieu of flowers, memorials can be made to Hope Hospice of New Braunfels, 611 N. Walnut Ave., New Braunfels, TX 78130 or St. Ferdinand Catholic Church, P.O. 757, Blanco, TX 78606.

Arrangements were under the direction of Crofts-Crow Funeral Home of Blanco.

Elsewhere in the Annual Report, you can read about how the integration of basic research discoveries, on-campus production of treatment materials, and clinical capacity for on-site clinical trials in CAR-T cell cancer therapy will advance this model in 2020. This is the kind of real-world academic and clinical progress accelerating discovery from the lab to therapies and cures envisioned by Charles C. Gates and other generous funders when the Gates Center was originally founded.

The reason Eileen Attar gave birth to Brady in a room where few people knew anything about EB is that it impacts only about 20 in one million live births. Researchers estimate about 25,000 to 50,000 families in the U.S. are living with EB patients. With the Attar family now in Denver, after moving north from Houston to find Brady the best possible care, researchers can learn from Brady and dozens of other families at the children's specialty clinic just how the rare disease shows up every day. Eileen would welcome the company — she absorbs information, encouragement and support from every possible source.

"When I think about it too much, it's too daunting," she said. "How is this sustainable? That's when it really hit me. It's bigger than me."

EB is an inherited skin and soft-tissue disorder that causes blisters and peeled skin with even light touches. It also can create sores and scar tissue in the mouth, esophagus, lungs, muscles, eyes, nails and teeth. There are multiple forms of EB, and Brady has the most severe kind, dystrophic EB.

Straight from the womb, Brady was born with sores and abraded lips from kicking in-utero and from descending the birth canal. Children with severe cases need hours of bandaging and wound care each day, like severe burn victims, and everyday movement such as crawling or walking can cause pain and more damage.

Brady often has throat wounds and scarring that make him not want to swallow, and nearly all his feeding is done through a GI portal in his stomach. Eileen and Chris carry around a worn notebook full of reminders about his nutrition, his wound care, his medications and appointments.

Kristina Byrne is a full-time registered nurse who also accompanies Brady to school, and has become so embedded in the family she's often told she can never quit.

Kristina touches Brady affectionately on the leg, and tells his Children's Hospital medical team, "I hope his wife likes me," waiting for them to get her joke about her serious commitment.

There is no current treatment or cure for EB, only attention to its symptoms. Research has focused on both external applications of materials that could restore skin cells, or injections of modified cells that might eventually override the patient's damaged cells.

The Gates Center has grants to work in both areas and more.

In its second 21st Century Cures Act award, the Center said "the funds will advance innovative Consortium research and expansion of treatment in areas, including a potential "Spray-On Skin" application of regenerative cells, and a promising treatment of internal diseased tissue with systemically targeted-delivery cells."

Spray-on delivery of new cells "has the potential to revolutionize treatment" for kids with EB, Roop said.

Still, even if proven successful, transforming significant portions of skin will be time-consuming. That's why researchers also are zeroing in on internal delivery of modified cells that would travel through the blood stream to damaged cells and replace them.

"We're going for the moon shot, we're going for the complete cure," Roop said. Moreover, knowledge gained in EB research has already and will continue to inform other medical disciplines — new methods of skin growth and targeted cell delivery could help millions.

Preparing for meetings with EB parents, Roop sometimes has to temper those words in his own head. "You realize you have to be very very cautious, and very realistic. The FDA is very cautious. And it always takes longer than the parents want," Roop said. "We don't know exactly what the timeline is going to be to get FDA approval. I'm an eternal optimist by nature, and I'm sure it shows when I start talking, and parents get excited."

Human clinical trials of promising EB treatments are still some time away. The approval process may seem even slower than on other new drugs, as therapies that involve altering cells may need longer observation times to ensure there are no unwanted cell mutations.

At the Attars' meeting with Gates researchers and their primary EB clinician, Dr. Bruckner, Chris Attar mentioned that at their last research update, they had looked into a microscope and watched altered healthy cells move in to replace damaged cells, a process called homing. He asked if that method was closer to approval.

Bilousova responded, "We see cells going into the tissue, but it's relatively few cells. So one ongoing issue is making the homing more efficient." That will require complex production machinery to be set up in new Gates research laboratories in 2020. Researchers must avoid mistakes or rushing that can set back promising lines of investigation.

"If we don't do it right, not only do we fail the patient, we fail the whole field," she told the Attars.

Eileen and Chris understand all this, and accept it on one level, as supporters of science and research.

On another level, where they are parents of a beautiful boy who loves Paw Patrol and wrestling his older brother, Leo, and the family jam sessions that erupt when Brady has his music therapy in the living room, they would do anything to lessen his daily agonies.

Around the conference table, Eileen said, "So much of hope depends on how Brady is doing day to day. On good days when he's doing well, this all makes sense. And on days when things are not going well or something new has happened, it's 'We needed this yesterday already.'"

Roop listens and nods. These are the sorts of tensions and contradictions that flow constantly around the Anschutz Medical Campus, between the research towers and the clinics. The families inform and motivate and inspire the professionals.

"I see a parent like you and I have to try not to oversell it," Roop said. "But we are in fact very optimistic about so many things."

Etiquette near police

My father was an officer in the Navy. He was on ships as well as a flyer in World War II. He knew how to give orders. "Swab the decks" and "Batten down the hatches," he'd say.

He kept a tight rein on me and my brother. At the time, I thought he was unreasonable. Looking back, he did the right thing.

We were taught to refer to people older than us as Mr., Mrs. or Miss. (There was no "Ms.") As such, we were to respect and obey anyone older than we.

I keep my car registration on top in my glove box, though now it is suggested to keep it attached to the visor on the driver's side. If you should get stopped by the police, stay in the car, roll down the window and keep your hands in view. Be polite to the officer.

Honey will get you further than vinegar. Say yes sir, no sir or yes ma'am, no ma'am. Do what they ask. Don't resist arrests if they handcuff you. If you feel like fighting, do it in court. That's what they're for — fight another day in court.

I hope this helps.

Grasshoppers ate the blackberries

Or did they?

My garden isn't perfect. Take for example a recent problem. After watching my strawberry plants struggle year after year in my alkaline soil, I replaced them with blackberries this spring. The plants were strong, vigorously growing, enjoying life.

I was planning on getting blackberries next year. Then something started eating the foliage!

My first thought was grasshoppers. I have plenty of grasshoppers in my garden.

They didn't seem to be eating anything else, which isn't unusual. Grasshoppers have plants they favor feeding on.

As the name suggests, yes, they do eat grass. They also consume crops, vegetables in your garden as well as landscape plants.

In the landscape, according to retired horticulture extension agents John Copper and Stan Lovelace, the various species of grasshoppers preferred common landscape plants such as day-lily, hibiscus, iris, lirioppe, mondo grass, mums, peach foliage, photinias, privets, roses and wisteria.

Plants ignored included salvias and sages, lantana, nandina, turks

'Help Texans Better Their Lives' focus of Texas AgriLife Extension programs

Texas A&M AgriLife Extension's vision is to "Help Texans Better Their Lives."

And, Gillespie County Extension Agent Shea Nebgen is helping make that goal a reality through a number of health and safety programs geared toward children and adults.

"We have a lot of information available on the different programs," Nebgen said, "to help make a difference in people's lives."

While some programs focus on getting the message out about healthy choices to students, others are designed to help adults start making those small changes toward becoming healthier.

Among the programs offered through Texas A&M AgriLife Extension with the help of local collaborators are Walk Across Texas!, Health Education, Better Living for Texans, Child Safety Seat Education, Child Care Education, Food Protection Management/Food Handler's Program and 4-H Nutrition projects.

For more information on any of the programs, contact Nebgen at 997-3452.

Walk Across Texas!

It's 832 miles across Texas, and participants in the eight-week Walk Across Texas! program are encouraged to Walk Across Texas.

The 2020 Walk Across Texas! program wrapped up in April in Gillespie County.

Nebgen reported that this year, the program had 161 participants, making up 20 teams.

Participants log their miles each week and report them online. In return, Nebgen sends out healthy tips and recipes on Mondays to keep walkers motivated and teach them how physical activity can benefit their health.

"We all have to remember that we have to start by making small changes," Nebgen said. "It took us a long time to get to the size we are or to our current activity level, but we can make small changes to get back to being healthy."

She noted that Walk Across Texas! has been recognized as a Best Practice Physical Activity Program by the Texas Department of State Health Services.

Over the lifetimes of the 161 participants, it is estimated that 46 people could prevent the onset of diabetes and 66 participants could delay or prevent cardiovascular disease through increased physical activity, Nebgen said.

Including the cost of lost wages and health care costs, the total potential economic impact for the 2020 team participants is approximately $462,268, she reported.

Health Education

Through this initiative, Nebgen often collaborates with other organizations to offer educational programs for youth and adults on how to make decisions that affect their own health.

"It is always exciting when the students see me outside of the classroom and they walk up to me and say 'I am eating more fruit' or 'I am eating healthy,'" Nebgen said. "I know that the messages I am teaching are being remembered by the students."

Partnering with the Fredericksburg High School HOSA students, Hill Country Memorial Wellness Center, Methodist Healthcare Ministries — Wesley Nurse Program and the Fredericksburg Independent School District, health fairs are held on the Fredericksburg elementary, middle school and high school campuses on a rotating basis.

Nebgen explained that screenings include My Plate, personal care products, sugar and fat models, vision, dental, handwashing, body mechanics, body alignment, drinking/texting and driving, pulse ox, step test, Heimlich, drug education, fast food choices, glucose screening, CPR Anytime, blood pressure, hearing and the importance of water.

Nutrition and health programs were conducted at St. Mary's and Fredericksburg Independent School District. The programs focused on teaching information on My Plate, hand washing, basic nutrition and calorie needs, fruits and vegetables, milk consumption, protein, carbohydrates and dietary restrictions.

Healthy Texas Youth Ambassadors became part of the Gillespie County 4-H program this this year and they have made a big impact in the community.

They created an e-cigarette survey that was administered to Harper and Fredericksburg high school and middle

Yes we CAN!

Aluminium cans can actually be recycled and put back onto the shelf at your local grocery store in just about 2 months.

Aluminium cans are probably the most recycled item, at least in the United States. While this is true, you can also recycle other forms of aluminium as well.

Recycling an aluminium can helps to save a great deal of energy; in fact, it's enough to run your home television for about three hours!

Most beverage cans are made up of aluminium, even though there are other products that go into it as well.

Searching for Jaws, part 2

The rod bent and the reel screamed.
"Go on boy! Land that shark!"

My son, Barrett, responded to Captain Ronny just as would any 16-year-old boy being yelled at — with a blank stare.

"Grab the rod!"
Barrett snapped to, grabbed the rod and jerked back to set the hook. He reeled for all his might only to fall backward a few moments later as the 80-pound braided test gave way to something unknown.

"That was a big 'un," the captain offered. "Too big to play with for sure. We'll keep trying."

That next try produced a gafftop catfish, a slime-covered fish of about five pounds that Captain Ronny explained wasn't worth cutting into chum to attract sharks. "They ain't called snot rockets for nothing. They're just a goo-covered waste of a fish."

Barrett caught two more gafftops before the captain suggested we move on.

We traveled 15 minutes across the bay to a wide sandbar within view of San José Island that sat five and a half feet below the water's surface.

Here, the brown waters of the bay faced off against the greenish-blue waters of the incoming tide.

The captain said this would be the perfect spot to "ambush an ambush predator" and showed Barrett once again how to rig a dead skipjack, then a dead mullet. They set the baits into the drift and we waited.

After a half hour or so of "maybes," "might bes," and more gafftops, a slight nudge against upon the line caught the captain's attention. He studied the distant point where the line entered the water then declared, "I think we got one."

The reel screamed once more as yard after yard of line unspooled at breakneck speed. Barrett took the rod into his hands and dropped into the padded chair just before the center counsel.

The captain unleashed a violent torrent of commands and pantomimes. "Reel! Keep that rod up! Reel! Don't look at me ... REEL! Keep that rod up, dammit! Quit being a little girl! You're gonna lose him ... REEL!"

Did I give this kid the best birthday present ever or what?

Barrett fought the unseen for more than 20 minutes. His hand cramped, his face contorted in pain and in the horrid realization that he might look weak. He strained against the pulling of the rod and against the fleeing juggernaut attached to it.

The shark came within sight, then ran once more. Barrett leaned back and cranked the reel with strained fist. The shark broke the water next to the boat and Barrett's eyes went wild in excitement and disbelief at the predator.

"Quit looking at him and REEL!" The captain fought to get a rope around the shark's tail. "DAMMIT TO HELL!" Captain Ronny screamed as his iPhone fell from his shirt pocket, bounced off the shark's dorsal fin, and sank into the drink. Barrett smirked in response.

Barrett yelled at me for help.

Barrett Young reeled in a six-foot, two-inch bull shark for his 16th birthday. — Photo by Gayne Young

"Take his fin! Help me get this rope around him." I grabbed the shark's pectoral fin, ignored its sandpaper skin as it grated against my palm and fingers. Captain Ronny got the rope around the beast's tail and tied it to the forward cleat. He turned to Barrett and thrust out his hand in congratulations.

"Way to go kid. Ya' done good. He's a helluva birthday present."

Barrett nodded and smiled, his blue eyes bouncing between exhaustion and overwhelming pride.

Barrett's 16th birthday shark trip produced a monster bull shark. The predator measured just under six foot, two inches in length, tipped the scales at a tad over 120 pounds, and filled our 45-quart Yeti cooler to the brim with meat.

He also gave my son the idea of shark fishing again for his 17th birthday.

"I'll do better next time," Barrett said. "I mean, I would have done better this time if I had known the captain was gonna yell at me the whole time I was fighting the shark."

Again, did this kid get the best birthday present ever or what!

LAWN AND GARDEN

cap, vitex, junipers, crape myrtle and dwarf yaupon.

If grasshoppers could have the pick of your garden, they will favor beans and sweet corn.

So, if something is eating the leaves of your squash, check for cucumber beetles. These are tiny beetles that look like a yellow-green elongated ladybug. They can have spots or stripes. They will nibble at the foliage of squashes and pumpkins, as well as the flowers and the fruit.

Grasshoppers are unlikely to eat tomato foliage. If it looks like something is stripping the leaves but leaving the stems, look for hornworm caterpillars. One large hornworm can strip a plant in a few days.

Caterpillars were one of my initial suspicions when looking at the damaged blackberry plants.

Something didn't seem correct though.

Caterpillar damage is usually stripping or straight cuts.

Grasshoppers will chew ragged cuts into plant foliage, starting on the outside of the leaf and working their way in. I also didn't see caterpillars or grasshoppers on the blackberries.

Grasshoppers are easy to recognize. They have a long body, two spiky legs on the sides, a round head with bulging eyes, short antennae and four legs near the front of their body to prop themselves up.

Grasshopper species come in a variety of colors, include the classic green or brown. There are striped kinds such as the Aztec Spur Throated Grasshopper which are quite pretty.

The young nymph stage lasts six weeks before they reach their full size and appetite. When they become adults, they gain wings.

In addition to grasshoppers in my garden, I've also seen katydids.

Katydid look very similar to grasshoppers.

They have that hopper-like body but longer antennae. The females have what looks like a stinger coming out of their rear. This is used to deposit eggs, not sting. The males make an electric chattering sound. It's supposed to be the source of their name, but to me, it doesn't sound like Katy did anything.

Grasshopper issues can be weather-related.

Consecutive hot dry summers with warm autumns can cause populations to spike.

A cold wet spring will decrease grasshopper populations.

Location plays a role in grasshopper numbers.

It makes sense that my garden has a high grasshopper population, because it is next to a field. Fields, along with ditches, fence rows and weedy areas, are prime location for a grasshopper to lay her eggs.

Normally, major grasshopper damage does not occur in cities, though in some areas of Fredericksburg, spots near fields may be more susceptible.

Control of grasshoppers is difficult. It's best to do while they are small.

You will save yourself some damage to your plants and the insecticides and baits are more effective.

If you find that grasshoppers are attacking particular plants in your landscape or vegetable garden, you can apply a carbaryl dust insecticide, or spray a permethrin or zeta-cypermethrin insecticide.

Example brand names include "Sevin" dust, "Bonide 8 Insect Control," or "Liquid Sevin."

Organic options are available.

Horticultural oil or insecticide soap is not recommended, because these work by smothering the insect, and chasing a grasshopper around your garden to spray it is a frustrating exercise.

Better would be to spray the foliage with kaolin clay, which doesn't kill the grasshoppers, but gums up their mouthparts when they try to eat something treated with it.

Make sure when spraying that you shake the bottle often and rinse out your equipment thoroughly. Lightweight row cover could be used to exclude grasshoppers, but hungry grasshoppers can chew through it.

"Nolo" or "Semaspore" baits are another option.

They contain a tiny microbe that infects grasshoppers when they eat the bait.

It will kill small grasshoppers. Adult grasshoppers eating the bait may lay less eggs, but it probably will not kill them.

This bait should be applied when the grasshoppers are small and spread out over a large area. It must be kept cool and check its expiration date before purchase.

From talking to people who have used this, sometimes it works very effectively the first year, sometimes only with annual application over a period of years.

Chickens and other fowl are another option.

Chickens will eat most insects found in vegetable gardens, but they will also undesirably dig and peck your tomatoes.

You can keep them penned outside the garden or let them in for short periods of supervised time. If you have a grasshopper infestation, it may take a lot of chickens to make a difference.

I resorted to the easiest option, which was dusting my blackberries with an insecticide. It worked the first time and the plants grew back.

Then it rained, and the plants got damaged again. With this second round I took another look at the damage pattern.

While grasshoppers can nibble on limbs and branches, it would be rare for them to cut them off entirely.

A truly fractured fairy tale

Disney casts off underwhelming franchise starter 'Artemis Fowl' on streaming service

There are two key components keeping the theatrical cinema system alive these days: film franchise and kids' movies.

It's why almost every new feature aimed at a target audience is virtually guaranteed a sequel or reboot — Hello, "Sonic The Hedgehog" and "Mulan!" — within the first month of release.

At the forefront of this trend for the better part of a decade is Disney, the cinematic monopoly behind the Marvel Cinematic Universe, Star Wars franchise and a plethora of animated children's films from their home studio as well as Pixar.

Disney's latest attempt to generate movie revenue — a budding franchise for preteens in the mold of "Harry Potter" — dropped on their streaming platform, Disney+, last week after being shifted several times down the release calendar due to the coronavirus pandemic.

It's also likely that the Kenneth Branagh directed film would have underperformed at the box office regardless of health concerns as the highly convoluted plot and uneven performances left it as a mixed bag.

Based on a series of novels by Irish author Eoin Colfer, "Artemis Fowl" follows the title character on a quest to steal a missing fairy relic and exchange it with an unknown mystical power who has kidnapped Artemis's father.

A tale filled with goblins and dwarves and trolls, the film should naturally offer shades of "Lord of the Rings" in a modern setting. But things just ring false from the opening minutes as Josh Gad's giant dwarf Mulch Diggins is arrested and proceeds to narrate the entire film in flashback, dragging audiences through a series of convoluted events that tie together Colfer's first two novels.

Newcomer Ferdia Shaw — grandson of Oscar nominee Robert Shaw — takes on the title role with the bravado needed of a child actor playing someone with a genius level IQ, but there's neither enough charm nor snark in the performance to make the younger Artemis Fowl anything more than a walking contradiction of terms.

Shaw's Fowl is dismissive yet compassionate, but only when he feels like it. The performance is largely hidden beneath Shaw's stern sneer, masking the poorly written screenplay that finds Artemis always knowing exactly what to do with very little prompting and rarely out of control of any situation.

Perhaps part of this standoffish persona comes from Shaw replicating the performance of Colin Farrell as best he can, as a son would seek to mimic his distant, yet aggressively sure-of-himself father. As the older Artemis Fowl, Farrell's limited screen time prevents him from developing any depth to the performance although it's clear the stage is set for meatier work in a future installment, if Disney so chooses to continue the series.

Dame Judi Dench plays a secondary role as a fairy police commander — with pointyears to boot — and although the part is far beneath her incredible talents, Dench gives the fairies' section of the film some needed gravitas and isn't nearly as atrociously audacious as her turn as Old Deuteronomy in last year's musical "Cats."

Gad offers the strangest performance of the entire cast, woefully miscast in Hagrid from "Harry Potter" cosplay Ferdia Shaw — grandson of Oscar nominee Robert Shaw — stars as a young genius thrust into the world of fairies, goblins and dwarves in director Kenneth Branagh's "Artemis Fowl," now streaming on Disney+.

but with a gravelly Batman voice as Diggins. For a film that leans heavily into the world of the unbelievable, Gad sticks out like a sore thumb as a force that pulls viewers out of their suspension of disbelief and reminds them very clearly that they're watching mediocre cinematic "Dungeons and Dragons" fodder.

Branagh's third turn with a Disney franchise after 2011's "Thor" and 2015's "Cinderella" proves conclusively that the Irish filmmaker can't successfully make the transition from serious period drama to playful adaptation. "Artemis Fowl" lacks the intensity and darkness that Alfonso Cuarón brought to the "Harry Potter" series nor the brightness and charm that Taika Waititi invigorated the third "Thor" installment with.

While a second run at the series feels almost inevitable at this point given the nature of the film business, a massive injection of life and spirit into the follow-up will be necessary to make Artemis' first adventure feel anything less than perfunctory.

Decent enough for children in need of something new to watch this summer on a streaming service parents probably have subscribed to already, "Artemis Fowl" is a watchable, yet unmemorable film.

Harper News

By Peggy Ernst

A wonderful reunion held last Saturday in the park for the Whitewood, Whitworth and Brown families. Besides the visits with each other, many of them came inside the museum and enjoyed looking over the many exhibits.

Oma Bierschwale's funeral service was held last Friday morning in the perfect place — the community park, near the rodeo grounds, where she and her family have spent so many years helping out the park, FFA and others. Attendees gathered under the pavilion, told stories they remembered of her 90 years and recalled so many periods of her life as well as her twin sister, Ona Green, whose service was held exactly one month ago.

Oma is survived by her sons, Buzzy and Scott, and their families, and a sister, Linna Bierschwale. Burial was in the Harper cemetery.

Services were also held this past week for Milda Kothmann, 75, in Junction. Milda lived many years on Oehler family land on Ranch Road 479 South, but spent the last few years in an assisted living home.

An additional loss we learned of was Rodney Duderstadt, son of Freddie and Yvonne Duderstadt. Rodney spent many years in Harper, but made his home of late in Brady.

Services for Dugless Carter were held on Saturday, June 20, at graveside in Medina. Dug was born in Harper, went through all 12 years of school in Harper, and was especially known for his athletic abilities and sports. He is survived by a son, daughter, grandson and granddaughter. He was preceded in death by four brothers, a sister, a son, and both his wives.

We also send condolences to the family of Steven Segner.

The VFW is still planning their annual kids' parade on July 4 at Marktplatz in Fredericksburg. Even though the regular July 4th parade has been canceled, don't miss the kids.

The Harper Market on 290 had their grand opening this weekend with a great attendance. They had fresh fruit and vegetables, served food on their porch, had live music and many booths. Check it out one day.

Doss News

By Shirley Lange

The Doss Community Club has canceled the annual Fourth of July picnic and fireworks. We wish everyone good health and a safe holiday.

The annual fundraising Fish Fry in September for the Doss Volunteer Fire Department is being discussed. We will have to wait and see if everything gets in better health. But now is the time to gather donations for the rural fire department. Please send your donations to Doss Fire Department, P.O. Box 31, Doss, TX 78618 or call Tuttle Geistweid at 669-2352. We thank everyone for their support.

Church services at St. Peter Lutheran Church on Sunday, June 28, will be at 10:45 a.m. Our hearts are saddened, for this will be the Rev. Mark Ward's last sermon before he retires.

So much has changed. Some folks cannot remember which way to turn. Thank goodness for family, friends, television and telephones. We need them all.

No rain for this area, but we all hope it is not too far away. We do not need any out-of-control fires. Be cautious.

M&Ms: A parable

Note: This column is not a metaphor for any current situation, nor is the writer responsible for any lesson readers may take away.

M&Ms have always been my favorite candies. So much so that when I was banished overseas for two years, it was one of the American treats I smuggled into the foreign country.

That trip happened at a time during "the decade of no red M&Ms." Because starting in 1976, the makers of M&M candies discontinued putting red candies into their delicious bags of unmelting goodness. Here's why.

In 1971, the Soviets conducted a study that linked Red Dye No. 2 to malignant tumors in rats.

Because Red Dye was used to color many food products in the U.S., including hot dog casings, frostings, ice cream, condiments, and, yes, candy, the public did what it does best — stirred itself into a frenzy. National media picked up the story, splattering it on covers of magazines and leading TV newscasts. The public demanded that the government do something. In 1976, in "an abundance of caution," the United

Texas AgriLife Extension offers series on understanding, managing diabetes

“Do Well, Be Well with Diabetes,” a series developed by the Food and Nutrition Unit of the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service, is now available online.

The entire course is now on the AgriLife Learn website, the Texas A&M AgriLife home for online courses. The cost is $30 for the entire seven-module series.

Type 2 diabetes is a chronic disease, and while it is not currently curable, it is manageable. According to the Texas Demographic Center, more than 2.3 million Texans have been diagnosed with the disease.

“Texas A&M AgriLife is involved in health and wellness initiatives to improve the overall quality of life for Texans,” said Danielle Krueger, AgriLife Extension manager, College Station. Krueger said the seven self-paced modules were developed to help people with Type 2 diabetes learn how to manage their blood glucose through basic nutrition and self-care management.

It should take from five to seven hours in total to complete the entire series, but participants can go in and out of individual modules and complete them in their own time.

The “Do Well, Be Well with Diabetes” program is beneficial to several audiences, including those who have recently been diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes, have had diabetes for many years, or are the spouse or caregiver of someone with diabetes.

“The series is also useful for those with prediabetes in helping them understand what they can do to keep from developing Type 2 diabetes,” she said.

Modules have been developed by a registered dietician and are presented in a concise, factual manner along with activities for building diabetes management skills. Each has been updated with the most current medical information on diabetes and refers to additional resources.

“The program teaches participants the skills to effectively manage their diabetes or reduce the risk of developing diabetes through better nutrition, exercise and monitoring blood sugar levels,” she said.

Modules contain information on how food affects blood glucose, the proper method to test blood glucose, understanding medications and how to incorporate foods into a healthy eating pattern.

“The cost of this entire series is about the same as you’d be charged as a copay for a single visit to a registered dietician,” Krueger said. “It’s a very reasonable price to pay for a lot of up-to-date research-based practical information and guidance on how to manage diabetes.”

She added that diabetes education provides an opportunity for those with Type 2 diabetes to better understand how to manage it through healthy eating, being physically active and following proper self-care management.

“Those who participate in an evidence-based diabetes education program have shown to delay and prevent further complications associated with Type 2 diabetes,” Krueger said.

States Food & Drug Administration delisted Red Dye No. 2.

Even though the coloring was now banned, parents were convinced that the red M&M's were killing their children.

For M&M/Mars, there was no recourse. To stop the bleeding of red dye, they were forced to cease production of all red M&M's.

I remember the red purge clearly. This was at the peak of my M&M consuming years. Yes, I kept buying them. Yes, I kept eating them. And yes, they tasted the same — all colors of M&M's taste exactly the same, people just ascribe different flavors to different hues.

The company added an orange M&M as a palliative. But a bag of M&M's without the cheery red M's robbed some of the joy of eating the treat that had comforted me since childhood.

However, I, and America, soldiered on. We consoled ourselves by consuming 100 million M&M's each day, stuffing our pain in piles of brown, yellow, green, tan —and orange — treats.

Yet the loyal candy consuming public missed its little red tidbits. News started coming out about flaws in the original studies. The FDA could never produce conclusive results that Red Dye No. 2 proved to be carcinogenic in humans. Other countries, even those with stricter food and drug laws, never followed the FDA guidelines banning Red Dye No. 2. M&M/Mars never stopped including the red M&M's in their candies sold in foreign markets, or even in their other popular domestic brand — Skittles.

By 1987, M&M/Mars was dealing with backlash from consumers demanding to get their red M&M's back. So, after 10 years of wandering in the red-less wilderness, the company reintroduced red M&M's to the U.S. market.

That's a pretty telling story on many aspects of our culture — media overreach, public paranoia, corporate control, political intrigue, right? But here's the rest of the story:

M&M/Mars had never used Red Dye No. 2 to color its candies.

Read that again:

Never. Used. Red. Dye. No. 2.

Never.

The entire “ban red M&M's because they are killing our kids” frenzy was based on nothing. M&M/Mars even announced this at the time.

But consumers were in no mood to be logical. So, the company pulled the red candies from the color mix, “to avoid consumer confusion.”

Feel free to insert your own ending to this sweet parable.

Peaches aren't just for cobblers anymore

By Case Fischer

CULINARY ADVENTURE

Mark Wieser & Case Fischer

Summer is underway and the Fourth of July is approaching, and I can't let another week go by as we, and other area peach growers, are harvesting our peaches and enjoying the fruit of our labors, without sharing another great peach-centric recipe.

We love our peaches here and our proud to share them with the many people who come from all over to experience them.

At Das Peach Haus, some of the traditional things that we have made from our peaches include peach cobbler, peach ice cream, peach smoothies, and, of course, peach preserves.

While those are all amazing, it's fun to branch out and try new recipes from time to time.

We are fortunate to work with a lot of great cooks and recipe creators in our line of work, many of whom are our customers. These are arm-chair or home kitchen chefs who are creating fun recipes in their own homes daily.

Today, I am sharing a Peach Margarita recipe from one of our friends who has fun creating recipes and sharing them with us. It's fun, easy, tasty and a great way to enjoy a beautiful summer afternoon while many of our traveling plans have been curtailed.

I hope you try this, enjoy it and share it with friends. After all, we are from the Hill Country of Texas.

What better way to share what our culture is about than combining some fresh Hill Country fruit with a great Tex-Mex classic.

discarding all pulp.

2. Add tequila, triple sec, lime juice, peach purée, and ice into a shaker. Shake well. Pour into the glass. Garnish with peaches or limes.

AgriLife Extension experts offer outdoor cooking safety tips

Cleaning grill grates, keeping a clean workspace and properly storing and preparing meats are all important to maintaining food quality and avoiding foodborne illness, said Texas A&M Agrilife Extension Service experts.

Grate cleaning

Davey Griffin, Ph.D., AgriLife Extension meat specialist in the Department of Animal Service of Texas A&M University, said cleaning the grill grate is not as simple a proposition as it may seem.

"A lot of people think scraping the grate clean with a wire brush is an effective way to clean it, but if you're using a substandard wire brush, some of the metal particulate can get transferred on the grate, into the food and then ingested," he said. "This can cause some serious health problems."

Griffin said using a nylon brush on a cool grate can be an effective measure in removing most of the large pieces of charred food from the grate.

"You don't want to use a nylon brush on a hot surface as it could melt the bristles," he said.

Griffin said the grates of smaller grills can be removed and washed with soap and water or possibly power washed if the equipment is available.

"Another effective way to clean grates is to ball up a piece of aluminum foil to where there are still some rough edges and use that to thoroughly scrub the surface," he said. "I've also known people to cut an onion in half and use the flat surface of the onion to clean the grate. That onion has an acidic content that helps break down the leftover food and will also add a little more flavor to the item being grilled."

Griffin said meat should always be cooked to the recommended internal temperature. Using a properly calibrated meat thermometer is the best way to ensure meats are adequately cooked.

"You also want to make sure the grilling surface is sufficiently hot before you place any meat or vegetables on it," he said. "An easy way to determine that is to hold the palm of your hand about six inches over the grate. If you feel it is warm enough for you to want to remove it after a few seconds, then the grill is ready to use."

Griffin noted there are also a number of safety steps that can be taken to lower the risk of starting an unwanted fire while grilling.

Workspace cleaning

The most common issue of food safety-related issue when grilling is the possibility of foodborne illness from inadequately stored or undercooked foods, said Jenna Anding, Ph.D. AgriLife Extension nutrition specialist in the Department of Nutrition and Food Science at Texas A&M.

"It's important to keep a clean workspace and ensure meats are properly stored and prepared," Anding said. "And it's important to maintain food quality and freshness by ensuring proper temperatures during storage and cooking."

She said poultry, fish, seafood or ground beef should be cooked or frozen within a day or two of purchase. Steaks or pork chops should be cooked or frozen within four to five days.

"The safest way to thaw meat or poultry is by placing it in the refrigerator a day or two before you plan to cook it," she said.

Some meats defrosted in the microwave may not thaw out evenly and other parts of the food may be partially cooked, so it's better to let them thaw in the refrigerator.

"Don't thaw meats at room temperature as this may increase the chance of foodborne illness," she said.

If cooking away from home and not sure about a water source, take a container of fresh water and paper towels or use antibacterial towelettes or hand sanitizer, Anding said.

"Be sure to wash hands before and after touching raw meat, poultry or seafood, making sure food preparation surfaces, cutting boards, grilling utensils and serving platters are washed and sanitized. And if you've placed raw meat or fish on a platter before grilling, don't use that same plate to serve the food unless it can be cleaned with hot, soapy water first."

Recommended food temperatures

Anding said poultry should be cooked to an internal temperature of 165 degrees.

"Fully cook meats like hot dogs to 165 degrees and hamburgers to 160 degrees," she said. "Beef, pork, lamb, veal steaks, chops and roasts should be cooked to at least 145 degrees. For safety and quality, however, allow these foods to rest for a few minutes after removing them from the grill before serving."

After cooking, Anding said, be sure to keep the food hot until it is served — at least 140 degrees — otherwise, eat or refrigerate it right away.

"Keep food covered and never let it sit out for more than two hours," she said. "If the weather is 90 degrees or hotter, eat or store your food within one hour."

Virtual road trip featured on June 26

"Travelers" will join a virtual road trip from June 22-26 to explore the wonders of Texas. They will stop in the Texas Hill Country on June 26.

From the Gulf Coast and Piney Woods to the far reaches of the Panhandle and the Rio Grande and everywhere in between, a different region of Texas will anchor each day of the virtual road trip.

Using real-time satellite maps and live streams, Texans will undertake a journey on the Texas Counts Virtual Road Trip and celebrate the state while attempting to increase 2020 Census responses.

As of June 17, only 56.1% of Lone Star residents had completed their questionnaires, making Texas 41st among the 50 states. This low response rate could endanger billions of dollars in future funding and the state's representation in Congress, according to a spokesperson.

While the road trip is virtual and accessed online, many "pit stop" events will be held in person by local hosts with appropriate social distancing and safeguards against COVID-19. For more information, contact Texas Counts at info@TexasCounts.org or visit us online at txcounts.me/roadtriptoolkit.

How to Draw a Mermaid

MERFOLK

Find the two identical mermaids.

Stories of creatures that are part fish and part human have been told by people around the world for hundreds of years. Today, their stories are told in movies and their images decorate clothing, toys, bedding and more!

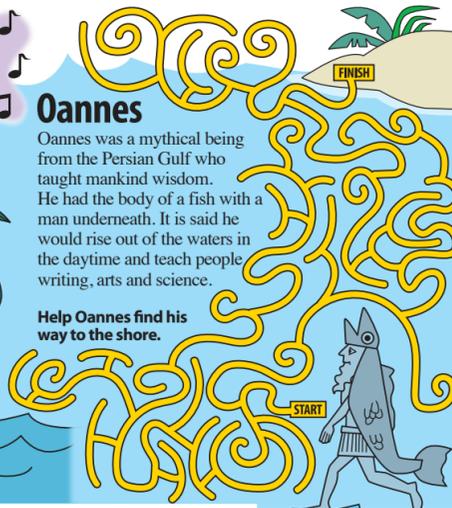

The Little Mermaid

Many people know the story of The Little Mermaid because of the Disney animated movie. The tale, first told by Hans Christian Anderson, is about a mermaid who risks her life to save a human prince. With the help of an evil witch, she trades her tongue for legs. In the original story, the prince does not marry the mermaid and she evaporates into sea foam!

Use the code to discover the city in Denmark where there is a famous statue of The Little Mermaid sitting on a rock in the harbor.

Oannes

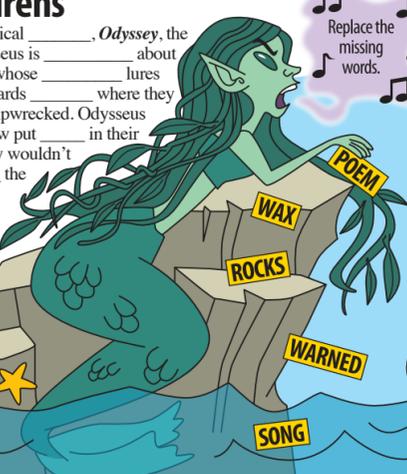

Oannes was a mythical being from the Persian Gulf who taught mankind wisdom. He had the body of a fish with a man underneath. It is said he would rise out of the waters in the daytime and teach people writing, arts and science.

Help Oannes find his way to the shore.

The Sirens

In the classical Odyssey, the hero Odysseus is _____ about sea sirens whose _____ lures sailors towards _____ where they become shipwrecked. Odysseus and his crew put _____ in their ears so they wouldn't _____ the _____ songs and they survived.

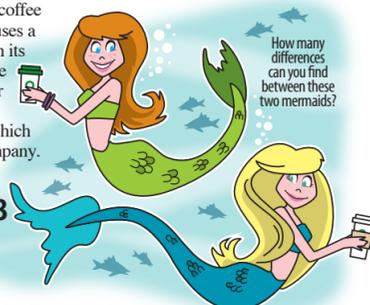

Replace the missing words.

Coffee Mermaid

A popular coffee company uses a mermaid in its logo. Circle every other letter to discover which coffee company.

How many differences can you find between these two mermaids?

The Fiji Mermaid

In the summer of 1842, a report went out that there was proof that mermaids were real. What looked like a mummified creature was displayed at P.T. Barnum's American Museum of Oddities for many years. Was it real? No. The dried skeleton was manmade by combining the skeletons of two animals. Unscramble the letters to find out which two.

EXTENSION PROGRAMS

school students so they could collect local data.

They have also assisted in hosting assemblies to bring in guest speakers to discuss the vaping problem and they have personally presented programs throughout the community.

Better Living For Texans

As part of the Better Living for Texans program, Nebgen partnered with the Fredericksburg Primary School to teach a week-long nutrition series. The program focused on introducing youth and adults to eating healthier and basic food safety concepts. They have also partnered with the school to conduct programs in order to gain the status as a "Healthy School Recognized I."

The Better Living for Texans program is a cooperative endeavor among the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service, Texas Health and Human Services Commission, and Food and Nutrition Services. The grant monies received help educate limited resource families through nutrition education.

Child Safety Seat Education

Going hand-in-hand with health education, is Texas A&M AgriLife Extension's Child Safety Seat Education.

Nebgen has been a certified child safety seat technician since 2003.

She said she became a technician after she washed her son's car seat and realized she couldn't put it back together again.

And, she said, "I was misusing

it. I wanted to learn how to install it correctly for the safety of my child."

Child Safety Seats are inspected through appointments held at the Gillespie County Extension Office.

"Kids always leave safer than when they arrive," Nebgen said.

Along with the community-wide child safety seat inspections, Nebgen also visits with high schoolers to stress the importance of child safety seat education.

"I want them to know that once they become parents, there is a network of resources and people to help them with child safety seats," Nebgen said.

Grow It, Cook It

Nebgen and Beth McMahon, Gillespie County Horticulture Agent, are partnering to offer a "Grow It Cook It" series.

The program discusses how to grow a particular vegetable and then Nebgen discusses various ways to cook the vegetables.

Participants are provided with taste tests and recipes of the dishes.

So far this year, programs have focused on onions and sweet potatoes.

The third in the series will be offered in September and will focus on cauliflower.

Child Care Education

Working with other Texas A&M AgriLife Extension offices, Nebgen and a group of fellow agents offer a child care provider training conference in Kerrville each fall.

Last year, 109 child care providers and directors who provide care for 1,263 children enrolled in 22 centers or family day homes attended the conference and earned continuing education training.

Food Protection Management, Food Handler's Program

Because food safety is a concern among consumers, Texas A&M AgriLife Extension offers the Food Protection Management and Food Handler's Program courses.

Nebgen explained that the two-hour food handler course is targeted toward front-line food service workers.

Food handlers can choose to take the class offered through Nebgen's office or online in either Spanish or English.

She added that the food handler's class is also taught at Fredericksburg High School to help students earn the certification.

"Food Safety: It's Our Business" is the curriculum for the two-day food manager's certification training.

Nebgen noted that Gillespie County has 175 retail and 25 institutional facilities to inspect each year.

4-H Foods and Nutrition

Through the 4-H Foods and Nutrition project, youth learn basic cooking skills, food safety, health and nutrition and more.

The project includes the Food Show, Nutrition Quiz Bowl and the Food Challenge.

Youth participating in the Food Show take part in a series of classes and then have the opportunity to put their skills and knowledge to the test.

Students are judged on their dish, preparation and knowledge of foods.

The Nutrition Quiz Bowl is a "Jeopardy"-like event in which teams are quizzed over all aspects of health and nutrition.

Nebgen said that one of the most popular foods and nutrition events is the Food Challenge.

"Students get to work as teams with their friends for the contest," she said.

Teams are given a bag of groceries, a list of ingredients but no directions and 40 minutes to create a dish.

In that time, they must prepare and correctly plate a dish that has been cooked to the right temperature.

In addition, they must give a five-minute presentation on how the recipe fits into My Plate, cost, food safety, nutritional value and healthy substitutions.

Students in these contests first compete at the county level. Winners then advance to the district competition, and from district, senior division winners have the opportunity to compete on the state level.

President's Column
Central Hill Country Board of REALTORS®

How Texas Property Taxes Are Changing
The Appraisal Process | Week 3 of 6

Curious as to some of the changes that are taking place within the Central Appraisal Districts this year? These are just some of the changes to Senate Bill 2 aka Texas Property Tax Reform and Transparency Act of 2019.

- ★ Transparency
- 1) All properties will be appraised using the SAME / DEFINED Method. Senate Bill 2 provided several measures designed to help taxpayers better understand the property tax system, including notices of meetings and real-time estimated tax databases hosted by each county appraisal district.
 - 2) Prevents Conflict of Interests ~ no longer can someone that's elected into public office or works for a local government that collects your tax dollars (School District, City, or County) cannot also work for the Central Appraisal District.
 - 3) If you don't agree with the appraised value, you can still protest!

Please keep in mind, with over thousands of residents in our counties, there may be a delay in response as protest priorities are given to:

- 65 yrs or older
- Disabled
- Military Service
- Veterans or Spouses

★ Feedback About Protest Process
Now, you'll be able to give feedback on the protest process and on the Appraisal Review Board covering items such as; fairness and efficiency.

Don't forget:
Texas does not collect a statewide property tax. Laws are created to determine the structure and process of local taxing entities and county appraisal districts, including taxpayers' opportunities to engage with those entities. This is how the Texas Legislature gets involved, and in turn, how the Texas REALTORS® advocates for property owner rights.

Next week, we'll discuss Transparency. In the meantime, continue to do the greater good. Love one another and this too shall pass.
Many Cheers & Blessings, Emaly

THANKS

CARD OF THANKS
A "Thank You" to our Community from the Wyatt Family

Recently on May 10 we awakened at 1:30 a.m. to find our retirement home on fire. Very quickly our home was engulfed in flames. Even though the Willow City Volunteer Fire and Rescue Department arrived in record time the fire was too advanced to extinguish. With the heroic assistance of the Fredericksburg Fire Dept., the Stonewall Volunteer Fire Dept., the Harper Volunteer Fire Dept., and the Fredericksburg Fire EMS the fire was contained from the surrounding trees. Further assistance was provided by the Gillespie County Sheriff's Office, the Gillespie County Emergency Management and the American Red Cross. Additional assistance was provided by our church family, the Fredericksburg United Methodist Church. While we cannot thank everyone individually we are so grateful for their service to our communities and the continued love and support they give in times of tragedy and needs. To all our friends and neighbors we thank you for your help during our time of need.

Technology in Our Lives

Simple Steps To Declutter Your Phone

(NAPS)—Have you ever scrolled endlessly through your photos on your phone to find that special one you took weeks ago? Or, perhaps you have that one important e-mail that takes forever to find in your inbox?

An organization overhaul isn't just for your closet. You can take advantage of some nifty features on your phone to organize your photos and e-mails, which will help make your life easier and save you time.

The experts at global tech care company Asurion spoke with phone users about the pain points they have with highly utilized features including photo storage, managing e-mails and contact lists. The experts then shared tips to help participants streamline and save time in these areas. After using the tips, people were amazed with how these simple shortcuts made finding things so much faster and easier. Check out what Asurion experts shared:

Easy Setup Photo Albums for People, Places and Objects

For Android Phones:

- Manage and share your photos more easily with Google Photos as your primary photo app.
- Easily locate photos by person or pet when you group by similar faces. Tap => tap Settings > tap Group similar faces > turn on Face Grouping
- Add a name to find photos faster. Open a person or pet photo > tap Menu > tap Info > Faces will be separated under people > tap a face > tap Add a Name > enter the name

For iPhones:

- Create an album from existing photos. Open Photos app > Open the All Photos Album or tap the Photos Tab > tap Select > Select all photos you want to add to the new album > tap Add To > select New Album
- Use facial recognition to quickly find photos of people you love. Open a photo with a person's face in it > swipe up over the photo > tap circle with person's face > tap Menu icon in the top left corner > tap Add to people's album > enter person's name > tap Done or Next
- Find the photos you've labeled. Open Google Photo App > tap search bar at the top of screen > type in search criteria > scroll through results for your photo

Decluttering your phone can help you feel more empowered, stay organized and save time.

For iPhones:

- iOS makes it easy to find a photo by identifying objects, people, places and pets. Open Photos app > tap on Search Icon > type in search criteria > scroll through results for specific photo
- Find Anything on Your Phone Quickly

For Android Phones (if applicable to your model):

- Go to home screen > swipe down to show your App Drawer > click the Search icon > type in what you want to find

For iPhones:

- Use the Swipe to Search function to search across all apps and data. Go to your home screen > swipe down from the middle of the screen > tap the search field > type in what you want to find
- Find E-mails Faster

For Android Phones:

- Find the e-mails you're looking for faster by grouping them under different labels. Go to Gmail website (not the app) > Settings > Labels > Create new label. Once the label is created, then you can label groups and individual e-mails can be filed under each folder from within the app.

For iPhones:

- Find e-mails faster by filtering through specific requirements. Open Mail app > from Inbox (or All inboxes) tap icon in bottom left corner > tap Filtered By

Pointers For Parents

Schools, Parents And COVID-19

The current health crisis is encouraging many families to take another look at how their kids are educated.

(NAPS)—K-12 education has gone through a seismic shift in the wake of COVID-19. Parents are finding themselves thrust into homeschooling, and educators, into virtual schooling. EdChoice, a national nonprofit, nonpartisan organization, teamed up with Morning Consult to release results of a recent poll to find out how it has affected families and teachers. They found that parents are clearly anxious about sending their kids back to school; 66 percent said they were concerned their children will be exposed to the virus in school. The majority (68%) are also concerned their child is missing important instruction time. The silver lining to so many states having closed down brick and mortar schools: A solid majority of parents said they felt at least somewhat prepared for the transition to e-learning and distance learning. Parents are slightly more likely to say they felt very or somewhat prepared (70%) than were teachers (67 percent). There is only one type of school choice program that allows families to receive funds into a flexible spending account to customize an education for their child. They are called education savings accounts, or ESAs. And according to EdChoice's Public Opinion Tracker, 67 percent of Americans support them. These results are part of a new, larger polling project, the EdChoice Public Opinion Tracker, is new dashboard updates every month with results of public survey questions not only on COVID-19 but also on K-12 education topics such as schooling, testing, spending and school choice. Learn More For more findings from EdChoice's Public Opinion Tracker visit www.edchoice.org.

IMPORTANT NOTE
 There are times when our greatest source of inspiration originates from community developers from across North America. As is the case with the ad campaign that we suggest on this page. However, despite our research efforts, it is sometimes difficult to pinpoint the exact origin of the idea. In this case, the concept was inspired by THE YELLOWPAPER, from Newcomb, WV.
